BIOMES

Take a closer look at the images above. Each is home to a variety of plants and animals, but no two are the same. Although they're all capable to life, there are quite a lot of differences too. Many of these differences are abiotic, or have to do with the non-living parts of the environment. Abiotic factors include temperature, the amount of oxygen in the air or water, and the kind of soil present.

infer, or make your best guess, about some of the abiotic factors in each of the images.

Lastly, the chapparral biome is a coastal biome with hot, dry summers and mild winters. It has mostly shrubs with a few short trees. Deer, birds, and rabbits live in the chapparral.

Tundra When we think of deserts, we usually think of a hot and dry place, but did you know that deserts can be cold too? The Tundra in Alaska is the largest cold desert, but there is so much snow (and) that it's still considered a desert. Both plants and animals must adapt to dry life in the desert. Many develop unique ways of surviving such as water storage.

extremely nutrient rich soil. Here you'll find a variety of plants and animals. Due to their dry and hot climate, plants in both savanna and grasslands are adapted to survive relatively common fires.

Desert When we think of deserts, we usually think of a hot and dry place, but did you know that deserts can be cold too? The Great Salt Desert in Utah is the largest cold desert in the world. It's cold there, but there is so much snow (and) that it's still considered a desert. Both plants and animals must adapt to dry life in the desert. Earth is an amazing planet. It has many different environments that make perfect homes for millions of species. The largest major habitats that exist worldwide are known as biomes. Most likely, you're familiar with many of these: desert, rainforest, grassland, etc. Each biome is unique and has its own set of characteristics that make it different from the others. The combination of all these habitats is what makes our Earth so abundant in biodiversity.

How many biomes are there? Do all water environments constitute a single aquatic biome? Are all fire-filled ecosystems considered a forest biome? The number of biomes you could simply depend on how specific you'd like to be. Let's take a look at some of the largest biomes, and the abiotic and biotic factors that define them.

Marine

Freshwater

Savanna

For fish, birds, frogs, whales, and other aquatic species. Aquatic Biomes Since water covers over 70% of the Earth, the largest biomes are the aquatic biomes. Marine biomes include coral reefs and estuaries, but the two major ones are the marine and freshwater biomes. The marine biome, made up of the world's oceans, is so big it's usually divided into smaller biomes. Estuaries, for example, are found in the ocean, but they're actually a mix of both. The freshwater biome, on the other hand, is made up of lakes, rivers, and ponds. These are often divided into smaller biomes as well. Grassland Grassland biomes live up to their name! They're made up of open and very few trees. The two major grassland biomes are the savanna and temperate grassland.

The temperate grasslands, on the other hand, make up the plains of middle America. Forest There are several different kinds of forest biomes, including: The rainforest is most likely the most famous forest. This lush forest is home to a vast number of plants and animals. Rainforests are home to a wide variety of species and are found in many parts of the world.
