In the first paragraph of a chapter, there should be no indentation.

This document template will automatically add a 0.5" indentation at the start. However, you can hit the backspace to bring the sentence back to the start of the line.

Every paragraph after the first one should start with this indentation. You may have the urge to add an extra line between paragraphs, but that is not standard practice—so avoid that if possible.

"What about dialogue?" you might ask. Reedy has a guide on their blog to punctuating and presenting dialogue where you can learn all about that. However, the general rule is that you start a new paragraph every time you change the speaker. And every time that happens, you should leave it indented.

"Just like this?" you ask.

"Exactly like that," I reply.
