Abstract

The research looks into the structure, conduct and performance of the world's leading pension funds, namely the ABP (The Netherlands) and California Public Employees' Retirement System (U.S.A.), and benchmarks the Government Service Insurance System (Philippines) against the best practices instituted by these leading organizations. A Survey of Awareness and Practices of the GSIS Pension Fund is included in the research to validate the GSIS fund performance.

Introduction

What is a pension system? What are its goals?

These two questions are at the heart of this study. But more than defining a pension system and its goals, this study delves deeper into the questions critical to a pension fund system. These concern its stability in providing for services as well as its potential for growth in providing for benefits. Thus, the central argument proposed, developed and analyzed in this study is this: best practices ensure growth of the pension fund and adequacy of its services.

For this purpose, this study looks into mandatory pension schemes, established by law and compelling at least some category of the economically active population to participate. In this instance, mandatory retirement and pension coverage for civil servants or workers in the government is the subject of this research.

The goal of a pension system is to provide for replacement for labor earnings lost as a result of old age, premature death, invalidity, and temporary or permanent work injury. Public pension systems seek to address the duty to ensure a minimum income or replace a predictable percentage of lost earnings [1]. Many public pension funds are largely defined benefit schemes financed on a pay-as-you-go basis [2].

In Asia, the three main types of public pension systems in the region are: provident funds, defined benefit systems in market economies, and pension schemes in transition economies. While the magnitude and nature of problems differ from country to country, most pension schemes have common problems such as affordability, poor returns on financial assets, inadequate service levels, and inefficient administration [3].

In many countries, public pension funds are among the largest in terms of assets and number of participants and constitute an important share of financial assets. In 2005, the 10 worldwide largest pension funds worldwide in terms of assets were occupational schemes for civil servants, (www.seatsofwealth.com).

Approximately 800 million people, or one-third of the world's labor force, are covered by publicly-managed pension fund schemes (www.financialelearning.org/ppfm2004).

The management of these publicly-managed pension funds has been subject of much debate and attention owing to its sheer size and potential impact on financial stability as well as its sustainability to provide for future benefits.

Consider, the stock of pension assets of these public pension funds alone amount to fifty percent of the world's gross domestic product.

Focusing on these public pension funds and the GSIS pension fund, the paper will look into the best practices adopted to safeguard the growth and sustainability of the public pension funds.

Defining a pension fund

Pension funds are a form of social protection scheme that protects the population from economic hardship associated with social risks such as old age, sickness, accident, death of the breadwinner and/or unemployment [4]. Pension funds are established to provide safety nets to its members in their old age. The term "social security" is often used to refer also to pension fund systems [5]. However, social security should be seen strictly as both a process and result of means to ensure poverty relief or prevent it and maintain incomes by replacing incomes lost as a result of prescribed contingencies ISSA [6]. Social security comprises the length of health care and health insurance, life insurance, retirement, disability, maternity and unemployment insurance. Pension funds particularly and specifically consider safety nets for old age needs and entail the consideration of retirement and pension schemes for members of the fund.

The International Labor Organization (ILO) established the minimum standards for the financing, benefit structure and administration of social security schemes, the most important of which are consolidated in Convention No. 102 adopted in 1952 [7].

As so defined by Social Security Minimum Standards Convention No. 102, national security systems are enjoined to provide nine benefits, as follows:

1. Medical care;
2. Sickness benefit;
3. Maternity benefit;
