Better Dead J M Barrie:

BETTER DEAD J. M. BARRIE, When Andrew Riach went to London his intention was to become private secretary to a member of the Cabinet If time permitted he proposed writing for the Press It might be better if you and Clarrie understood each other the minister said It was their last night together They faced each other in the manse parlour at Wheens whose low peeled ceiling had threatened Mr Eassie at his desk every time he looked up with his pen in his mouth until his wife died when he ceased to notice things The one picture on the walls an engraving of a boy in velveteen astride a tree entitled Boyhood of Bunyan had started life with him The horsehair chairs were not torn and you did not require to know the sofa before you sat down on it that day thirty years before when a chubby minister and his lady walked to the manse between two cart loads of furniture trying not to look elated Better Dead JAMES MATTHEW. have a sentimental interest in Better Dead for it was my first published when I had small hope of getting any one to accept the Scotch and there was a week when I loved to carry it in my pocket and did not think it dead weight We are delighted to publish this classic book as part of our extensive Classic Library collection Many of the books in our collection have been out of print for decades and therefore have not been accessible to the general public The aim of our publishing program is to facilitate rapid access to this vast reservoir of literature and our view is that this is a significant literary work which deserves to be brought back into print after many decades The contents of the vast majority of titles in the Classic Library have been scanned from the original works To ensure a high quality product each title has been meticulously hand curated by our staff Our philosophy has been guided by a desire to provide the reader with a book that is as close as possible to ownership of the original work We hope that you will enjoy this wonderful classic work and that for you it becomes an enriching experience
