

REAR WHEEL AND BRAKE

Wheel removal

The wheel and brake assembly is retained in the swinging arm fork by a spindle nut located at end A of Fig. 24.

In order to remove the wheel, the rear brake adjusting rod and rear speedometer cable must be disconnected and the lower control arms released from the brake plate. To release the cable, remove the yellow threaded bolt and locate the two "16" knurled the rear chain at its driving link, and pull out the sprocket and withdraw the wheel. The speedometer drive may be pulled off its flange, entering the detector plate.

Brake shoe

The rear brake plate assembly may be withdrawn from the hub once the wheel is removed from the machine.

Turn the swinging arm through 90° and remove the shoes by lowering them upwards and towards rear of the brake plate.

The shoes are non-adjustable, but it is preferable to replace them in their original position if they are not damaged.

Reassembly of bearings

Once the rear wheel is removed from the machine and the brake assembly taken out, access to the bearings is possible.

Remove the speedometer driving flange, which has a left-hand thread. Turning to the left side of the wheel, remove the bearing ring securing the left bearing. This has a normal right-hand thread.

The bearings are retained by a square tube, which has a single or offset end over which the bearing inner cone sits. However, one bearing with the tube in position may be drawn out if the fork spring with both bearings diameters of 150 (2 1/2 ins.).

Take out the inner aluminium ring or grease container from the side from which the bearing has been removed, and use the opposite side in conjunction with a thin rod as a drift, to
