QUESTION A 60-year-old male with a 20-year history of type 2 diabetes mellitus presents with a 2-week history of increasing fatigue, weight loss, and decreased appetite. He reports that he has been unable to eat as much as he used to and has lost about 10 pounds. He also mentions that he has been feeling more tired than usual and has noticed some changes in his vision. He has no recent travel history and no known contact with anyone who has been ill. He is currently taking insulin and metformin. His last medical check-up was 6 months ago, where his blood sugar was well-controlled. He is a retired construction worker and lives with his wife. He has no other medical conditions and no family history of diabetes or related disorders.

ANSWER The patient's symptoms are suggestive of a chronic condition, likely related to his long-standing diabetes. The weight loss, fatigue, and decreased appetite are common signs of uncontrolled diabetes or a complication thereof. The changes in vision could be a sign of diabetic retinopathy. Given the chronic nature of the symptoms and the patient's history, a thorough medical evaluation is warranted, including a detailed history, physical examination, and laboratory tests to assess his current metabolic status and rule out other potential causes.
