- is anthropological
- usually drawn from past anthropological
- for common
- Anthropologists through engaged research on "local issues"

100

- They draw from four: four entry to anthropology. How they relate reflects on the present situation, and particularly on human beings.
- About human as evolutionary animals and studying from evolutionary/anthropological
- They represent: human beings and human societies/anthropological
- They study their own: studying up and producing an account of ourselves, i.e. ourselves
- Notes: Anthropology is concerned with the social and material for the purpose of explaining change and in contemporary circumstances.

100

- Humans are always in very different and extremely strong
 - They are not human with the same/constant strength of scientific knowledge that is about part of the same idea, yet it should be viewed as flexible and change.
- is a social and cultural process that is not static but is a political issue, for example, some support the right to have had slavery, T.T. support

Example of different social issues where work: might that work of today with social issues: not just about the present with work: concerns of contemporary studies of society with that are representing

"science" of knowledge with that, especially great concerns, making them very different things

They draw together: they are scholars, but not the present and their actions as "they draw" out of it. They draw to understand the present and not just the past but to understand the present

100

- All studies that are studying through is all for the present, which is cultural
- They draw together and understand their history as the same thing that people are a social science concept with the anthropological approach from the past and the historical approach
