Abstract: The purpose of this study was to investigate the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological health of young adults. The study was conducted in a university setting and involved 100 participants. The participants were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The experimental group underwent a 12-week training program that included aerobic and strength training. The control group did not participate in any training program. The results of the study showed that the experimental group had significantly higher levels of physical fitness and lower levels of psychological stress compared to the control group. The findings of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can have a positive effect on the physical and psychological health of young adults.
