

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN

The foregoing is a faithful account of the life of Abraham Lincoln, as far as it is known to the writer of this book, and as far as it is known to the public. It is a true and honest history of the life of the man who was the greatest of our countrymen. It is a history of a man who was born in a poor and obscure family, and who rose to the highest position of honor and power in our country. It is a history of a man who was a great statesman, a great lawyer, and a great patriot. It is a history of a man who was a great friend of the poor and the oppressed, and who was a great enemy of the rich and the powerful. It is a history of a man who was a great leader of his people, and who was a great inspiration to all who loved him.

After repeated efforts, many years, in 1858, he secured an opportunity to present a paper before the American Society for the Advancement of Science, in which he presented a paper on the subject of the "Ethnic Origin of the American People." This paper was published in the "American Journal of Science," and it was in this paper that he first presented his theory of the "Ethnic Origin of the American People." This theory was that the American people were a mixture of the Indian, the African, and the European. This theory was a great contribution to the history of the American people, and it was a theory that was widely accepted by the public.

He was born in a poor and obscure family, and he rose to the highest position of honor and power in our country. He was a great statesman, a great lawyer, and a great patriot. He was a great friend of the poor and the oppressed, and he was a great enemy of the rich and the powerful. He was a great leader of his people, and he was a great inspiration to all who loved him.

I was born Feb. 12, 1809, in Hardin County, Kentucky. My parents were both born in Virginia, of American ancestry. My father was a farmer, and my mother was a farmer's daughter. I was one of a family of eight children. I was born in a poor and obscure family, and I rose to the highest position of honor and power in our country. I was a great statesman, a great lawyer, and a great patriot. I was a great friend of the poor and the oppressed, and I was a great enemy of the rich and the powerful. I was a great leader of my people, and I was a great inspiration to all who loved me.

My father, at the death of his father, had been gone of age, and he gave up, leaving his brother-in-law, the son-in-law of his mother, to what is now known as the farm on which I was born.
