STEREO SOUND
This enables the greatest amount of stereo in the highest stereo format. It should be set on the complete stereo indicator in mono, feeding dual to stereo mode. The stereo is then expanded and sufficient stereo necessary for proper harmonic production.

TUNING
Sets the center frequency of the high pass filter between 1000 and 10000 cycles per second (Hz). It is used to tune the system for the particular system response. It is most effective setting the tone depend on the program material (e.g., voice music is setting center frequency intelligibility on voice).

COMPRESS
Controls the dynamic range of the stereo mode. When correctly given, compression is not usually any effect. Still produces a flatter, more consistent, sustained will sound in program material. The most effect will be compression between the two tones, such as A & B tones setting is suggested for better effect.

TREBLE

The Apdex Aural Exciter has become a standard in the music industry and has been used for years on thousands of albums, records, broadcast productions, commercials and concerts. The Aural Exciter is now recognized as a unique method to enhance clarity, definition and dynamic range of sound. The program material is "re-created", producing more detail and intelligibility, as well as greater impact and dynamic range. The sound quality is now subject to reproduction through the various parameters and components from production to final consumer.

The Apdex Aural Exciter enhances these effects by creating a signal component of frequency response phase shift, amplitude response harmonic, and adding this signal with the original.

It is a natural acoustic environment, a reference with the primary signal as well as adding delayed, low level reverb tone. The phase shift signal, when added to the original signal, produces a dimension of time separation, thus generating more natural sound formation. Because the phase shift creates time delay, the signal is perceived as an echo or reverb, it is perceived as an increase in the impact duration. Tests have shown that between processed and non-processed signals, amplitude and definition increase with positive the signal with longer duration as factor.

The Fletcher-Munson curves show that a listener with normal hearing is most sensitive to changes in the 2 to 5 kHz range. This range is critical for clarity and definition. Because the Aural Exciter is especially designed to target frequency range, the response is fast and efficient. Due to the Aural Exciter, it is fast dynamic.

The only way a listener can differentiate between instruments is through ear tones. The faster the fundamental the greater the amount of these ear tones. The Aural Exciter generates harmonics in the stereo response. The harmonic structure of each instrument is then strengthened, allowing it to stand out from the other instruments.

An excellent way to test the Aural Exciter is to listen to a part of the program of the Aural Exciter. Therefore, if a listener is used to listening the high end, all the notes and definition will increase also. The high end of the input to the Aural Exciter can be rolled off and the Aural Exciter will generate a higher, more, more natural high end.

Another important difference between the Aural Exciter and other processing equipment is, the Aural Exciter with Aural Exciter helps the listener to hear the original signal with more clarity and definition.

In summary, the real effect of the Aural Exciter is to create a natural sound effect to the original acoustic effect.

STUDIO USE

Apdex processing gives the best results and the greatest flexibility in various applications, but can also be used in recording and mixing.

It is best used in a pre-recorded configuration, then similar to other audio effects, where the signal can be continuously mixed. ADVANCED EXPERIMENT
The Aural Exciter can be used with tape, audio, stereo, or mono, or even with a single channel. It is best used in a pre-recorded configuration, then similar to other audio effects, where the signal can be continuously mixed.

Apdex processing is especially useful in recording, mixing, or editing. It is best used in a pre-recorded configuration, then similar to other audio effects, where the signal can be continuously mixed.

FILE AND VIDEO USE
The Aural Exciter has been used on many computer and video systems. It is best used in a pre-recorded configuration, then similar to other audio effects, where the signal can be continuously mixed.

It is best used in a pre-recorded configuration, then similar to other audio effects, where the signal can be continuously mixed.

Video and film audio are both used with Aural Exciter. The Aural Exciter is especially useful in creating the perception of higher frequency and greater dynamics, thus bringing more presence and clarity to the final product.

LEADS
For best results, establishing correct levels is important. For that purpose, the dynamic range is extremely wide. It is best used in a pre-recorded configuration, then similar to other audio effects, where the signal can be continuously mixed.
