

This collection of writings gathers together some of the best-known historians in the world to give a brand new perspective on the Second World War.

In forty-five essays, a selection of renowned writers describe the horror and heroism that defined a generation: the chaos of Europe and the Nazi reign of terror; the fight in Asia and the Pacific; the secret struggle of the intelligence services; the final Allied push into Central Europe and the atomic end in Japan. Each author writes on his own area of expertise: Antony Beevor on Stalingrad, David Fraser on the battle for Normandy, John Keegan on the last and most intense siege in history – the siege of Berlin. There are also memoirs of men who served in the thick of the action. An intelligence officer at El Alamein tells his story, and there are also the extraordinary recollections of a Kamikaze pilot who survived the Pacific War.

As Robert Cowley claims, the reader of this volume will come upon insights that he is not likely to find elsewhere. Much of what is written here is new, little documented, and even unexpected. And yet, in its entirety this is also a comprehensive account of the war as a whole. From Hitler's invasion of Poland in 1939 to the surrender of Japan at the end of the Second World War, the journey is long and relentless, but like the men who served their countries, it is remarkable.

Only the Most Able Stephen M. Duncan, 2012-10-05 The nature of the threats facing America today has drastically reduced the margin for error in senior political appointments In Only the Most Able Stephen M Duncan draws on a lifetime of military public service executive and legal experience to critique the political appointment process focusing on departments that deal with national security the Department of Defense and the Department of Homeland Security He looks at how the current methods for making appointments put people in positions for which they are not qualified and not prepared Rather he argues appointments should be made on the basis of one's qualifications and merits those who lead our military should be people with military experience and those who must make executive decisions should be people who have served and excelled in an executive capacity Identifying the successful traits of leaders such as Winston Churchill General George Marshall nationally known business executives and others Duncan argues with unusual insight and candor why the quality and performance of senior political appointees who are charged even in part with the nation's security must be improved and offers specific recommendations on how this can be accomplished This timely book will appeal to Americans of all political persuasions as well as those with particular interests in political and military history
