Arab Women Writers Dalya Cohen-Mor, 2005-05-19 A collection of sixty short stories by women writers from across the Arab world Arab Women Novelists Joseph T. Zeidan, J?z?f Zayd?n, 1995-01-01 This book assesses the contribution of women to the Arabic novel both in subject matter and form It begins by tracing the struggle over women's rights in the Arab world particularly the gradual improvement in women's access to education the first area in which women made significant gains Subsequent chapters discuss Arab women writers remarkable talents and determination to overcome the barriers of a male dominated culture survey the 1950s and 1960s during which women's writing gained momentum and more women writers emerged and address the shift in emphasis and attitude that women's literature underwent in the late 1960s especially following the 1967 Arab Israeli war when women novelists began to place more stress on international politics Zeidan adapts Western based feminist literary theory to a discussion of Arab women's literature but refrains from imposing that theory inappropriately on literature whose context differs significantly He compares the women's movements in Arab and Western cultures and the development of women's literature in those cultures and uses these comparisons to highlight similarities and differences between them as well as to consider how one affected the other His analysis culminates in the early 1980s the end of the formative years when women's writing had become a familiar part of Arabic literature in general and a positive reflection on the collective Arab consciousness Contemporary Arab Women Writers Anastasia Valassopoulos, 2008-03-10 This book engages with contemporary Arab women writers from Egypt Palestine Lebanon and Algeria In spite of Edward Said's groundbreaking reappraisal of the uneven relationship between the West and the Arab world in Orientalism there has been little postcolonial criticism of Arab writing Anastasia Valassopoulos raises the profile of Arab women writers by examining how they negotiate contexts and experiences that have come to be identified with postcoloniality such as the preoccupation with Western feminism political conflict and war the social effects of non conformity and female empowerment and the negotiation of influential cultural discourses such as orientalism Contemporary Arab Women Writers revitalizes theoretical concepts associated with feminism gender studies and cultural studies and explores how art history popular culture translation studies psychoanalysis and news media all offer productive ways to associate with Arab women s writing that work beyond a limiting socio historical context Discussing the writings of authors including Ahdaf Soueif Nawal El Saadawi Leila Sebbar Liana Badr and Hanan Al Shaykh this book represents a new direction in postcolonial literary criticism that transcends constrictive monothematic approaches

Arab Women's Representation in Arab Women's Writing and Their Translation Raidah I. Al-Ramadan, 2017 The encounter of translation studies with feminism has resulted in a number of studies concerned with how social sexual and historical differences are expressed in language and the ways in which they can be transferred across languages Hall Jacquemond Maier Massardier Kenney Said Simon and Salazar among others While a number of these studies show that language and translation play a significant role in the way women are represented in literature and argue that this representation cannot be separated from the society and culture which produces it little work has been done on Arabic literature a gap this study seeks to address Using quantitative textual analysis focusing on 10 novels written by Arab women writers and corpus tools the study demonstrates that Arab women are still represented in Arabic literature in terms of stereotypical images as oppressed and victimized even in literature written by Arab women. In turn, these texts are selected for translation into English and the translations themselves emphasize the victimization of women characters represented in the source text and thus translation participates in the construction of stereotypes about Arab women. The selected novels were written in Arabic by Arab women writers between 1980-2010 and translated into English by women translators in the period between 2000 and 2015. The study analyzes nouns, adjectives, and verbs that collocate with women-associated terms to determine the patterns of women's representation in Arabic and English texts. The study also seeks to determine if the country of origin of the author, the time of publishing, and the gender of the author/translator influence the way Arab women are portrayed. The findings of the study show three main patterns of Arab women's images: the victimized, the escapee, and the pawn. It also shows that English translations reflect the same patterns of Arab women observed in the source texts. Furthermore, the findings show that neither time, nationality, nor gender seem to have an impact on the way women are represented.

We Wrote in Symbols Selma Dabbagh, 2021-04-29. It is a little-known secret that Arabic literature has a long tradition of erotic writing. Behind that secret lies another: that many of the writers are women. We Wrote in Symbols celebrates the works of 75 of these female writers of Arab heritage who articulate love and lust with artistry and skill. Here, a wedding night takes an unexpected turn; beneath a canopy of stars, a woman on the run meets her match in a flirtatious encounter at Dubai Airport, and a carnal awakening occurs in a Palestinian refugee camp. From a masked rendezvous in a circus to meetings in underground bars and unmade beds, there is no such thing as a typical sexual encounter as this electrifying anthology shows. Powerfully conveying the complexities and intrigues of desire, We Wrote in Symbols invites you to share these characters' wildest fantasies and most intimate moments.

Arab Women Writers, 2012-02-16. Consisting of sixty short stories by forty women writers from across the Arab world, this collection opens numerous windows onto Arab culture and society and offers keen insights into what Arab women feel and think. The stories deal not only with feminist issues but also with topics of a social, cultural, and political nature. Different styles and modes of writing are represented along with a diversity of techniques and creative approaches, and the authors present many points of view and various ways of solving problems and confronting situations in everyday life. Lively, outspoken, and provocative, these stories are essential reading for anyone interested in the Arab world.

Arab Women's Lives Retold Nawar Al-Hassan Golley, 2007-10-18. Examining late twentieth-century autobiographical writing by Arab women novelists, poets, and artists, this essay collection explores the ways in which Arab women have portrayed and created their identities within differing social environments. The collection goes well beyond dismantling standard notions of Arab female subservience, exploring the many ways Arab women writers have learned to speak to each other, to their readers, and to the world at large. Drawing from a rich body of literature, the essays attest to the surprisingly lively and committed roles Arab women play in varied geographic regions at home and abroad. These recent writings assess how the interplay between individual, private, ethnic identity and the collective public global world of politics has impacted Arab women s rights
