The Autopoiesis of Architecture, Volume II Patrik Schumacher, 2012-04-24 This is the second part of a major theoretical work by Patrik Schumacher which outlines how the discipline of architecture should be understood as its own distinct system of communication Autopoeisis comes from the Greek and means literally self production it was first adopted in biology in the 1970s to describe the essential characteristics of life as a circular self organizing system and has since been transposed into a theory of social systems This new approach offers architecture an arsenal of general comparative concepts It allows architecture to be understood as a distinct discipline which can be analyzed in elaborate detail while at the same time offering insightful comparisons with other subject areas such as art science and political discourse On the basis of such comparisons the book insists on the necessity of disciplinary autonomy and argues for a sharp demarcation of design from both art and engineering Schumacher accordingly argues controversially that design as a discipline has its own sui generis intelligence with its own internal logic reach and limitations Whereas the first volume provides the theoretical groundwork for Schumacher s ideas focusing on architecture as an autopoietic system with its own theory history medium and its unique societal function the second volume addresses the specific contemporary challenges and tasks that architecture faces It formulates these tasks looking specifically at how architecture is seeking to organize and articulate the complexity of post fordist network society The volume explicitly addresses how current architecture can upgrade its design methodology in the face of an increasingly demanding task environment characterized by both complexity and novelty Architecture s specific role within contemporary society is explained and its relationship to politics is clarified Finally the new global style of Parametricism is introduced and theoretically grounded

The Architecture of Modern American Synagogues, 1950s-1960s Anat Geva, 2023-12-14 In the aftermath of World War II the United States experienced a rapid expansion of church and synagogue construction as part of a larger religious boom The synagogues built in that era illustrate how their designs pushed the envelope in aesthetics and construction The design of the synagogues departed from traditional concepts embraced modernism and innovations in building technology and evolved beyond the formal rational style of early 1950s modern architecture to more of an expressionistic design. The latter resulted in abstraction of architectural forms and details and the inclusion of Jewish art in the new synagogues. The Architecture of Modern American Synagogues 1950s 1960s introduces an architectural analysis of selected modern American synagogues and reveals how they express American Jewry's resilience in continuing their physical and spiritual identity while embracing modernism, American values and landscape. In addition, the book contributes to the discourse on preserving the recent past, e.g. mid 20th century architecture. While most of the investigations on that topic deal with the brick mortar challenges, this book introduces preservation issues as a function of changes in demographics, in faith rituals, in building codes and in energy conservation. As an introduction or a reexamination, The Architecture of Modern American Synagogues 1950s 1960s offers a fresh perspective on an important moment in American Jewish society and culture as reflected in their houses of worship and adds to the literature on modern American sacred architecture. The book may appeal to Jewish congregations, architects, preservationists, scholars and students in fields of studies such as architectural design, sacred architecture, American modern architecture and building technology, Post WWII religious and Jewish studies and preservation and conservation.

The Routledge Handbook of Architecture and Anthropology Marie Stender, Claus Bech-Danielsen, Aina Landsverk Hagen, Madlen Kobi, Ying Zhou, 2025-11-28. This handbook provides fresh insights into the debates and challenges that unfold in the cross disciplinary field of architecture and anthropology. Based on studies of empirical contexts across the globe, the authors launch and test a broad variety of methods and advance various theoretical concepts. Architecture and anthropology have always had overlapping interests but a range of developments in both areas make it more relevant than ever to intersect, overlap, combine or even merge the two disciplines. In anthropology, the spatial material and nonhuman turns have paved the way for an increasing interest in and need for changing the world rather than just studying it. On the other hand, architecture beyond designing structures has become interested in the uses and processes that unfold in during and after construction. The contemporary research and practices in both disciplines are testimonies that a cross disciplinary exchange is inspiring for engaging with and responding to the challenges of a world in ecological, societal and political turmoil. This handbook addresses established scholars, students and practitioners alike by outlining contemporary developments and tensions at the intersection of architecture and anthropology.

An Archaeology of Architecture Dennis Tedlock, 2013-06-01. Page by page, this book takes us on a journey through the built world that ranges from Greece to Guatemala and from New York to San Francisco. Tedlock practices what he calls photowriting, a creative process that brings photographer and writer together in the same person. It may be true enough that a photograph can show more than words can say, but it is equally true that words can say more than a photograph can show. A third space opens up in the middle where the viewer/reader can look back and forth between image and text at will. Tedlock looks at the built world with the eye of an archaeologist and ethnographer. His long experience as a fieldworker has made him acutely aware of the ways in which buildings are continuously altered by human actions and natural forces Anthropology assigns ruins to archaeology and structures currently in use to ethnology but Tedlock reminds the viewer that an occupied building bears marks of the same processes that produce archaeological remains As he puts it Whenever I look around at the worlds humans build for themselves I see archaeology in the making
