Wilmot Voss, 2014-04-24 Food blogs are everywhere today but for generations information and opinions about food were found in the food sections of newspapers in communities large and small Until the early 1970s these sections were housed in the women's pages of newspapers where women could hold an authoritative voice The food editors often a mix of trained journalist and home economist reported on everything from nutrition news to features on the new chef in town They wrote recipes and solicited ideas from readers The sections reflected the trends of the time and the cooks of the community The editors were local celebrities judging cooking contests and getting calls at home about how to prepare a Thanksgiving turkey They were consumer advocates and reporters for food safety and nutrition They helped make James Beard and Julia Child household names as the editors wrote about their television appearances and reviewed their cookbooks These food editors laid the foundation for the food community that Nora Ephron described in her classic 1968 essay The Food Establishment and eventually led to the food communities of today Included in the chapters are profiles of such food editors as Jane Nickerson Jeanne Voltz and Ruth Ellen Church who were unheralded pioneers in the field as well as Cecily Brownstone Poppy Cannon and Clementine Paddleford who are well known today an analysis of their work demonstrates changes in the country's culinary history The book concludes with a look at how the women's pages folded at the same time that home economics saw its field transformed and with thoughts about the foundation that these women laid for the food journalism of today

Agewise Margaret Morganroth Gullette, 2013-10-21 Let's face it almost everyone fears growing older We worry about losing our looks our health our jobs our self esteem and being supplanted in work and love by younger people It feels like the natural inevitable consequence of the passing years But what if it's not What if nearly everything that we think of as the natural process of aging is anything but In Agewise renowned cultural critic Margaret Morganroth Gullette reveals that much of what we dread about aging is actually the result of ageism which we can and should battle as strongly as we do racism sexism and other forms of bigotry Drawing on provocative and under reported evidence from biomedicine literature economics and personal stories Gullette probes the ageism that drives discontent with our bodies our selves and our accomplishments and makes us easy prey for marketers who want to sell us an illusory vision of youthful perfection Even worse rampant ageism causes society to discount and at times completely discard the wisdom and experience acquired by people over the course of adulthood The costs both collective and personal of this culture of decline are almost incalculable diminishing our workforce robbing younger people of hope for a decent later life and eroding the satisfactions and sense of productivity that should animate our later years Once we open our eyes to the pervasiveness of ageism however we can begin to fight it and Gullette lays out ambitious plans for the whole life course from teaching children anti ageism to fortifying the social safety nets and thus finally making possible the real pleasures and opportunities promised by the new longevity A bracing controversial call to arms Agewise will surprise enlighten and perhaps most important bring hope to readers of all ages
