Charles Darwin called him the greatest traveling scientist who ever lived Thomas Jefferson considered him the most important scientist whom I have met He was German naturalist and explorer Alexander von Humboldt 1769 1859 and when he died the entire Western world mourned the loss of one of the most notable scientists and popularizers of science of his day His five volume masterwork Kosmos sought to unify humanity s understanding of the natural world in the mid 19th century and brought a modern understanding of science to lay audiences for the first time This was the first comprehensive biography of the man and his work written to celebrate the centenary of his birth by German authors ALFRED DOVE 1844 1916 JULIUS L WENBERG 1800 1893 and ROBERT AV LALLEMANT 1812 1884 the latter himself an explorer and first published in English 1873 Though its subject was a private man about whom some things shall never be known he burned much of his personal correspondence these two volumes draw on firsthand memories von Humboldt s writings and other primary sources to create a dazzlingly engrossing portrait of the man who built the foundations of modern science Volume II covers von Humboldt s life in Paris in the early 19th century and the stimulating intellectual society that moved in there as well as his sojourn in Berlin during the political upheavals of the 1820s and 1830s and his relationship with King Frederick William IV in the 1840s It also details the writing and publication of Kosmos
