Take a closer look at the images above. Each is home to a variety of plants and animals, but no two are the same. Although they're all capable to life, there are quite a lot of differences too. Many of these differences are abiotic, or have to do with the non-living parts of the environment. Abiotic factors include temperature, the amount of oxygen in the air or water, and the kind of soil present.

infer, or make your best guess, about some of the abiotic factors in each of the images.

Earth is an amazing planet. It has many different environments that make perfect homes for millions of species. The largest major habitats that exist worldwide are known as biomes. Most likely, you're familiar with many of these: desert, rainforest, grassland, etc. Each biome is unique and has its own set of characteristics that make it different from the others. One of the most important factors in determining a biome is the amount of water and the amount of sunlight it receives.

How many biomes are there? Do all water environments constitute a single aquatic biome? Are all fire-filled ecosystems considered a forest biome? The number of biomes you could simply depend on how specific you'd like to be. Let's take a look at some of the largest biomes, and the abiotic and biotic factors that define them.

Marine

Freshwater

Savanna

Aquatic Biomes Since water covers over 70% of the Earth, the largest biomes are the aquatic biomes. Marine aquatic biomes include coral reefs and estuaries, but the two major ones are the marine and freshwater biomes. The marine biome, made up of the world's oceans, is so big it's usually divided into smaller biomes. Estuaries, for example, are a unique type of aquatic biome. The freshwater biome, made up of lakes, rivers, and ponds, is also a unique type of aquatic biome. The freshwater biome is also a unique type of aquatic biome. The freshwater biome is also a unique type of aquatic biome.

Grassland Grassland biomes live up to their name! They're made up of open and very few trees. The two major grassland biomes are the savanna and temperate grassland. The savanna is a type of grassland that covers much of Africa and large parts of Australia. These areas have a 6-8 month wet season in the summer and a 4-6 month dry season in the winter. The temperate grasslands, on the other hand, make up the plains of middle America.
