PRONUNCIATION & ALPHABET

AUTHORS' NOTE: Arabic is written and read right to left; words followed by h mean "plural".

© 2004 Blackwell Publishing Ltd, Journal of Internal Medicine 255: 103–110

- Like all Semitic languages, Arabic is written and read from right to left, on a horizontal line
- There are 28 letters, apart from the first letter ʾ, all the others are consonants, except for ay and ha which can be both consonants and vowels (a denotes the long vowel i and e respectively)
- There are no capital letters; the script is cursive: letters of a single word are linked to each other, except for ʾ, which are linked only to their right, i.e. the letter that precedes them; therefore, there will be a space followed by the next letter: ٱللَّهُ "Allah"
- Linking to each other, Arabic letters always form one, we must distinguish between an isolated, an initial, a medial, and a final form, the final form of ay is usually written without the 2 dots ي
 - Most of the letters are embedded in their final form; letters are elongated or shortened so that they occupy the entire space of a line (known as haraka length)
- The pronunciation and spelling of some consonants varies from country to country
- The letter l, al, and the letter h, ʾ, creates a special character, ʾl, ʾh, by some considered as the 29th letter of the alphabet
