

Patenting Biotechnological Inventions in Europe and the US

■ by Ayşegül Özdemir*

1) INTRODUCTION

The patent system is designed to grant inventors and innovators exclusive rights over their inventions for a certain period of time in exchange for public disclosure of their inventions.¹

Biotechnology is a new technique for industries and specialists and is making astounding progress. Advances in biotechnology are so rapid that many things are now possible, which, even a few years ago, would have seemed unimaginable.² It is a type of genetic engineering in medical and veterinary research resulting in modified productions and improved animal breeds.³ It is the use of microorganisms, mammalian cells and their products for industrial, agricultural, and medical purposes.⁴

This is also a growing discipline with a remarkably strong market. In 2006, global turnover was estimated at $60 billion, up 15 per cent from 2005.⁵

This rapid development has led to huge problems in biotechnology, particularly in patenting biotechnological inventions. In modern biotechnology, patents are a controversial issue and are more interesting for the public than any other technical field. Advances in biotechnology are bound up in ethical, religious, political and legal issues. Breakthroughs in this area of research invariably reach the headlines in the news. There have been reports on genome sequencing of gene development into protein expression, and enthusiastic discussion on the isolation of stem cell cultures, which makes human cell cloning possible. With public interest aroused, the occasion could arise when a scientific research institution, in order to protect their research investment, would have to consult a patent lawyer for advice. A rapidly increasing amount of genetic code and

Biotechnological Inventions and Patentability of Life Andrea Stazi, 2015-05-29 In today's technological world biotechnology is one of the most innovative and highly invested in industries for research in the field of science This book analyses the forms and limitations of patent protection recognition for biotechnological inventions Biotechnological Inventions Oliver Mills, 2016-04-15 Advances in modern biotechnology have produced profound and far reaching implications for the relationship between humans animals and the environment As a result a debate has arisen surrounding the legal moral and social problems connected with this technology a central part of the debate focusing on the role of moral considerations in the patent system as a form of regulation This fully revised and updated book examines this role and asks why in the context of biotechnological inventions morality has become an important issue It takes account of recent developments including reference to the situation in Australia By examining such specific recent cases the author elucidates the moral concerns associated with modern biotechnology thus providing an important contribution to the debate and a valuable resource for all those working in this exciting field Biotechnological Inventions: Moral Restraints and Patent Law Oliver Mills, 2018-01-18 Advances in modern biotechnology have produced profound and far reaching implications for the relationship between humans animals and the environment As a result a debate has arisen surrounding the legal moral and social problems connected with this technology A central part of this debate focuses on the role of moral considerations in the patent system as a form of regulation This book examines this role and asks why in the context of biotechnological inventions morality has become an important issue The origin policy and legislative history of patent law in both the United States and member countries of the European Union is examined with particular reference to the provisions relating to morality Examining specific cases the author elucidates the moral concerns associated with modern biotechnology thus providing an important contribution to the debate and a valuable resource for all those working in this exciting field

Maori and the Patenting of Lifeform Inventions, 1999 Biotechnology, Patents and Morality Sigrid Sterckx, 2017-11-01 This title was first published in 2000 This work documents an international and interdisciplinary workshop on the ethical aspects of the patenting of biotechnological inventions including genes plants and animals The public perception is discussed along with how these perceptions relate to ethical social and cultural factors The legal framework in Europe is laid out by several experts in the field of patent law and the situation in the US is also briefly described This edition also includes a general discussion of three important theories called upon to justify the patent system the natural rights argument the distributive justice argument and the utilitarian argument The chapter about the European Directive on the legal protection of biotechnological inventions has been updated A selection of provisions from the August 1997 draft as well as the final text of the Directive as adopted on 12 May 1998 are discussed and commented upon The patent provisions of the TRIPs Agreement the Agreement on Trade Related aspects of Intellectual Property rights concluded in 1994 as an Annex to the Agreement Establishing the World Trade Organization are also discussed and criticized paying particular attention to the implications for biotechnology patents Finally the question is asked whether the developing countries stand to gain anything from TRIPs A look at the results of empirical research conducted by commentators on the economics of patenting reveals that the new patent regime may prove to entail significant costs for the developing countries This second edition also contains material on the EU Directive on biotechnology patents adopted in May 1998 justificatory theories of the patent system and the TRIP s agreement on Trade Related aspects of Intellectual Property rights concluded in the GATT WTO framework Protecting and Exploiting Biotechnological Inventions Rosa Greaves,1991 Symposium on the Protection of Biotechnological Inventions World Intellectual Property Organization.
