TONE AND IRONY

Point of view:
"This number of souls in this Kingdom being usually reckoned one million and a half, it must necessarily follow that the least two hundred thousand couple should either be bred or sold."

Context:
The year 1726, eighteenth century, Ireland, Catholicism, poverty, especially children, no strong social structure, no education system

HISTORICAL CONTEXT

- Britain in 1726 during a time of economic growth and expansion in Ireland
- British landlords and their wealthy agents (the clergy) at home believed that the Irish population was too large and that the Irish were too poor
- The Catholic Irish majority suffered under harsh conditions and economic conditions, and were not helped by the British government
- References of the time often suggested that Catholic "poor" or "destitute" social conditions - criticism against the British authority

UNDERSTATEMENT

Point of view:
"These poor might be made into extremely good soldiers and musicians (leading for gentlemen)"

Context:
The suggestion is presented in a very subtle way through a very subtle statement. The author uses a gentleman's way of thinking that there is no need to mention the harsh social conditions - instead understatement would be better for the author
