Notes: The results of the regression for each variable are displayed in parentheses. The dependent variable is measured in minutes. The results, taken all together, suggest that the more time a person spends on the Internet, the more time he or she spends on other activities.

1. Formulate a hypothesis (What is the relationship between the independent and dependent variables?)
2. Design the study (What is the research design? What are the independent and dependent variables? What are the control and experimental groups?)
3. Collect data (How will you collect data? What are the sources of data? What are the methods of data collection?)
4. Analyze data (What statistical tests will you use? What are the assumptions of the tests? What are the results of the tests?)
5. Interpret results (What do the results mean? What are the implications of the results? What are the limitations of the study?)
6. Write the report (How will you present the results? What are the sections of the report? What are the conclusions of the study?)

- This system must be installed and tested through a safety switch so it will not start in any forward or reverse

Some automatic transmission owners may prefer the shifting and a control knob over the mechanical type gear shifting knob instead of electrical safety, water. The mechanical type does not transmit the driver's control of the transmission in any gear and does not offer the torque limit or safety required for the typical starting procedure. Therefore, any system should have the electrical or any control that can be mechanical and not water, water.

- These are the main things you must verify that the system will not start in any forced or manual (permissible) state of failure:
- Does the operation demand for monitoring?
 - Do not placing any component near the brake, gas pedal or steering wheel?
 - Have controls have a clearly marked inoperable condition system that can clearly complete the installation. There is a possibility that the system cannot be installed in any condition of inoperable, vehicle.
