Frontiers in the Acquisition of Literacy Claire M. Fletcher-Flinn, 2015-09-28 Learning to read and to spell are two of the most important cultural skills that must be acquired by children and for that matter anyone learning a second language We are not born with an innate ability to read A reading system of mental representations that enables us to read must be formed in the brain Learning to read in alphabetic orthographies is the acquisition of such a system which links mental representations of visual symbols letters in print words with pre existing phonological sound and semantic comprehension cognitive systems for language Although spelling draws on the same representational knowledge base and is usually correlated with reading the acquisition processes involved are not quite the same Spelling requires the sequential production of letters in words and at beginning levels there may not be a full degree of integration of phonology with its representation by the orthography Reading on the other hand requires only the recognition of a word for pronunciation Hence spelling is more difficult than reading and learning to spell may necessitate more complete representations or more conscious access to them The learning processes that children use to acquire such cognitive systems in the brain and whether these same processes are universal across different languages and orthographies are central theoretical questions Most children learn to read and spell their language at the same time thus the co ordination of these two facets of literacy acquisition needs explication as well as the effect of different teaching approaches on acquisition Lack of progress in either reading and or spelling is also a major issue of concern for parents and teachers necessitating a cross disciplinary approach to the problem encompassing major efforts from researchers in neuroscience cognitive science experimental psychology and education The purpose of this Research Topic is to summarize and review what has been accomplished so far and to further explore these general issues Contributions from different perspectives are welcomed and could include theoretical computational and empirical works that focus on the acquisition of literacy including cross orthographic research

Promoting Academic Readiness for African American Males with Dyslexia Shawn Anthony Robinson, Corey Thompson, 2019-11-13 This timely book tackles underlying issues that see disproportionate numbers of African American males with dyslexia undiagnosed untreated and falling behind their peers in terms of literacy achievement Considering factors including dialectic linguistic difference limited phonological awareness and the intersectionality of gender language and race the studies included in this volume illustrate how classroom practices at preschool and elementary levels are failing to support students at risk of reading and writing difficulties Promoting Academic Readiness for African American Males with Dyslexia shows that it is possible to provide every girl and boy and particularly African American boys with effective support and appropriate interventions enabling them to read at a level that is conducive to ongoing academic performance and success This argue the authors of this volume is vital to the social emotional moral and intellectual development of our society This edited volume was originally published as a special issue of Reading Writing Quarterly Overcoming Learning Difficulties It will be of great interest to graduate and postgraduate students researchers and academics in the field of African American Education Educational Equity Race studies Multiple learning difficulties and Literacy development

Resourcing Early Learners Sue Nichols, Jennifer Rowsell, Helen Nixon, Sophia Rainbird, 2012 The landscape of early childhood education and care is changing Governments world wide are assuming increasing authority in relation to child rearing in the years before school entry beyond the traditional role in assisting parents to do the best they can by their children As part of a social agenda aimed at forming citizens well prepared to play an active part in a globalised knowledge economy the idea of early learning expresses the necessity of engaging caregivers right from the start of children s lives Nichols Rowsell Rainbird and Nixon investigate this trend over three years in two countries and three contrasting regions by setting themselves the task of tracing every service and agent offering resources under the banner of early learning Far from a dry catalogue the study involves in depth ethnographic research in fascinating spaces such as a church run centre for African refugee women and children a state of the art community library and an Australian country town Included is an unprecedented inventory of an entire suburban mall Richly visually documented the study employs emerging methods such as Google mapping to trace the travels of actual parents as they search for particular resources Each chapter features a context investigated in this large international study the library the mall the clinic and the church The author team unravels new spaces and new networks at work in early childhood literacy and development
