Mirror for Man Clyde Kluckhohn, 2017-09-25 While the world has undoubtedly been shrinking at the same time it has grown more complex The likelihood of culture clashes leading to outright conflict is high perhaps higher than ever As Andrea L Smith convincingly argues in her new introduction to this classic work certain questions are as valid today as in 1949 when Mirror for Man was first published Can anthropology break down prejudices that exist between peoples and nations Can knowledge of past human behavior help solve the world s modern problems What effect will American attitudes likely have on the future of the world In Mirror for Man Clyde Kluckhohn scrutinizes anthropology showing how the discipline can contribute to the reconciliation of conflicting cultures He questions age old race theories shows how people came to be as they are and examines limitations in how human beings can be molded Taking up one of the most vital questions in the post World War II world whether international order can be achieved by domination Kluckhohn demonstrates that cultural clashes drive much of the world s conflict and shows how we can help resolve it if only we are willing to work for joint understanding By interpreting human behavior Kluckhohn reveals that anthropology can make a practical contribution through its predictive power in the realm of politics social attitudes and group psychology Andrea L Smith s new introduction provides convincing evidence for the continuing importance of one of the earliest public intellectuals

Anthropology and Modern Life F. Boas, 1995 Anthropology and Modern Life Franz Boas, 2020-09-07 In this insightful study Frank Boas connects aspects of human history with their manifestation in the modern world describing such topics as race relations nationalism and education When this book was first published in the 1920s the United States was grappling with racial tensions with heightening discrimination against black Americans As such Boas leads with the topic of race exploring the cultural contrasts that occur between different races The relationship between a person's country and the ideology of nationalism is explored Ideas of eugenics whereby humans breed according to desired traits are investigated and their limitations explained Later in the book concepts such as crime in modern society and concepts of cultural stability are examined Frank Boas is commonly described as the Father of American Anthropology in that he pioneered means of understanding the present of North America through the lens of its past Noted for his strong opposition to pseudoscientific beliefs that sought to affirm faulty notions of racial superiority Boas was likewise famous for asserting that no culture could be ranked as objectively better or worse a concept known as cultural relativism Ideas of evolving refinement whereby a culture grows more sophisticated with age and interactions between people are energetically dismissed
