Arquitectura militar en el Caribe (1689-1748) Pedro Cruz Freire,Ignacio J. López Hernández,Manuel Gámez Casado,Pedro Luengo ,Alfredo José Morales Martínez,2020-11-19 El patrimonio militar construido en el Caribe cuenta con unos notables valores culturales todav a poco conocidos internacionalmente Todos estos proyectos llegaran a construirse o no e independientemente de su estado de conservaci n se definen con dos caracter sticas inseparables su funci n defensiva y su valor como elemento de una imagen del poder gobernante La complejidad de estas propuestas de estrategia y propaganda han llevado a plantear como objetivo principal de este trabajo demostrar que cada potencia europea plante un modelo de gesti n Esto fue posible a partir de unos paradigmas te ricos que se definieron mediante la transferencia t cnica el desarrollo urbano de las ciudades y el geogr fico de las regiones as como la propia defensa de las poblaciones bajo su gobierno El mbito geogr fico elegido engloba tanto los puertos del Caribe como los del Golfo de M xico incluyendo no solo los mayoritarios administrados por el gobierno espa ol sino tambi n los de otras potencias europeas como Francia Inglaterra Holanda y Dinamarca El marco cronol gico se desarrolla entre 1689 y 1748 lo que permite abordar el impacto b lico internacional en la zona desde la Guerra de los Nueve A os hasta la de la Oreja de Jenkins o del Asiento Con los resultados del trabajo se pretende no solo un incremento de conocimiento sino tambi n su transferencia para entre otras posibilidades dar respuesta al inter s suscitado entre el turismo internacional y las poblaciones locales o en los c rculos acad micos dedicados a este tipo de patrimonio The fortresses built in the Caribbean form a heritage of remarkable cultural values which are still not internationally known All these buildings whether they were finished or not and regardless of their state of conservation are defined by two inseparable characteristics their defensive function and their value as an element of an image of the governing power The complexity of these proposals of strategy and propaganda have led to propose as the main objective of this work to demonstrate that each European power raised a model of management This was possible from some theoretical paradigms that were defined through the technical transference of the urban development of the cities and the geographical development of the regions as well as the own defense of the populations under their government The geographical scope chosen in this work includes both the ports of the

Caribbean and those of the Gulf of Mexico including not only the majority ports administered by the Spanish government but also those of other European powers such as France England Holland and Denmark The chronological frame is developed between 1689 and 1748 which allows approaching the international war impact in the area from the Nine Years War to the Jenkins Ear or the Seat War The results of the work are intended not only to increase knowledge but also to transfer it in order to respond to the interest raised among international tourism and local populations or in academic circles dedicated to this type of heritage
