Building The Dream Gwendolyn Wright,2012-05-09 For Gwendolyn Wright the houses of America are the diaries of the American people They create a fascinating chronicle of the way we have lived and a reflection of every political economic or social issue we have been concerned with Why did plantation owners build uniform cabins for their slaves Why were all the walls in nineteenth century tenements painted white Why did the parlor suddenly disappear from middle class houses at the turn of the century How did the federal highway system change the way millions of Americans raised their families Building the Dream introduces the parade of people policies and ideologies that have shaped the course of our daily lives by shaping the rooms we have grown up in In the row houses of colonial Philadelphia the luxury apartments of New York City the prefab houses of Levittown and the public housing towers of Chicago Wright discovers revealing clues to our past and a new way of looking at such contemporary issues as integration sustainable energy the needs of the elderly and how we define family A. as social types who embodied a romantic and leisured California lifestyle Addressing working and lower middle class readers who were prospering in the first mass consumption society the magazine published not only publicity stories but also beauty secrets fashion layouts interior design tips recipes advice columns and vacation guides Postwar femininity was constructed in terms of access to commodities in suburban houses as the site of family togetherness As the decade progressed however changing social mores regarding female identity and behavior eroded the relationship between idolized stars and worshipful fans When the magazine adopted tabloid conventions to report sex scandals like the Debbie Eddie Liz affair stars were demystified and fans became scandalmongers But the construction of female identity based on goods and performance that resulted in unstable fragmented selves remains a legacy evident in postmodern culture today
