Beyond The Silence My Life The World And Autism:

Beyond the Silence Tito Rajarshi Mukhopadhyay, 2000 Autism and the Myth of the Person Alone Douglas Biklen, 2005-08 The prevailing view of autism and disability is redefined in this beautifully written book Immediations Pooja Rangan, 2017-05-18 Endangered life is often used to justify humanitarian media intervention but what if suffering humanity is both the fuel and outcome of such media representations Pooja Rangan argues that this vicious circle is the result of immediation a prevailing documentary ethos that seeks to render human suffering urgent and immediate at all costs Rangan interrogates this ethos in films seeking to give a voice to the voiceless an established method of validating the humanity of marginalized subjects including children refugees autistics and animals She focuses on multiple examples of documentary subjects being invited to demonstrate their humanity photography workshops for the children of sex workers in Calcutta live eyewitness reporting by Hurricane Katrina survivors attempts to facilitate speech in nonverbal autistics and painting lessons for elephants These subjects are obliged to represent themselves using immediations tropes that reinforce their status as the other and reproduce definitions of the human that exclude non normative modes of thinking being and doing To counter these effects Rangan calls for an approach to media that aims not to humanize but to realize the full radical potential of giving the camera to the other

Elusive Brain Jason Tougaw, 2018-04-24 Featuring a foreword by renowned neuroscientist Joseph E LeDoux The Elusive Brain is an illuminating comprehensive survey of contemporary literature s engagement with neuroscience This fascinating book explores how literature interacts with neuroscience to provide a better understanding of the brain s relationship to the self Jason Tougaw surveys the work of contemporary writers including Oliver Sacks Temple Grandin Richard Powers Siri Hustvedt and Tito Rajarshi Mukhopadhyay analyzing the way they experiment with literary forms to frame new views of the immaterial experiences that compose a self He argues that their work offers a necessary counterbalance to a wider cultural neuromania that seeks out purely neural explanations for human behaviors as varied as reading economics empathy and racism Building on recent scholarship Tougaw s evenhanded account will be an original contribution to the growing field of neuroscience and literature

Always More Than One Erin Manning, 2013-01-09 In Always More Than One, the philosopher, visual artist, and dancer Erin Manning explores the concept of the more-than-human in the context of movement, perception, and experience. Working from Whitehead's process philosophy and Simondon's theory of individuation, she extends the concepts of movement and relation developed in her earlier work toward the notion of choreographic thinking. Here she uses choreographic thinking to explore a mode of perception prior to the settling of experience into established categories. Manning connects this to the concept of autistic perception described by autistics as the awareness of a relational field prior to the so-called neurotypical tendency to chunk experience into predetermined subjects and objects. Autistics explain that rather than immediately distinguishing objects such as chairs and tables and humans from one another, on entering a given environment they experience the environment as gradually taking form. Manning maintains that this mode of awareness underlies all perception. What we perceive is never first a subject or an object but an ecology. From this vantage point, she proposes that we consider an ecological politics where movement and relation take precedence over predefined categories such as the neurotypical and the neurodiverse or the human and the nonhuman. What would it mean to embrace an ecological politics of collective individuation?
