

PART 2:

STRATEGY IN THE AGE OF DEVASTATING INNOVATION

CHAPTER 4: The Singularity

The Singularity is the primordial ooze from which Big Bang Disruptors emerge. It is populated by weird experiments and often weirder experimenters, who fling together seemingly bizarre combinations of off-the-shelf parts and loosely connected service providers to launch new enterprises without a business model, let alone carefully crafted strategic plans with paths to profitability. They collaborate on design, testing, and even funding with customers. Not their customers—your customers.

This is the home of unencumbered development, where time to market now exceeds time in market. Right now, disruptors of all kinds are brewing, driven by programming “hackathons,” open source components, and venture-backed incubators. Their developers, increasingly financed by early users, sift through crowdsourced modifications and implement them directly into their products.

Because experimentation has become so cheap and the risk of failure so low, it's very likely that some market experiments aimed at the heart of your business are running right now. Most will fail. But it only takes one to devastate your business.

CASE IN POINT: MakerBot, a leader in the emerging 3D printing industry, emerged from the growing community of do-it-yourself innovators who raise money for their projects on crowdfunding sites such as Kickstarter and share their designs using open source protocols. MakerBot was founded by a former school teacher with tinkers he met at a hackathon. They recognized that off-the-shelf components were readily available to assemble a low-cost home 3D printer years before traditional industrial prototype manufacturers were ready to enter the market.

CHAPTER 5: The Big Bang

The Singularity, the wild period of failed early market experiments, signals the imminent arrival of true disruption. When the Big Bang comes, everything is sudden, including success and failure. Customers either arrive at once or not at all.

Big Bang markets are by their nature “winner take all.” In this stage of the shark fin, time seems to move at an accelerated pace—for entrepreneurs,

Twelve Rules for Big Bang Disruption

THE SINGULARITY

1. Consult your truth-tellers
2. Pinpoint your market entry
3. Launch seemingly random experiments

THE BIG BANG

4. Survive catastrophic success
5. Capture winner-take-all markets
6. Create bullet time

THE BIG CRUNCH

7. Anticipate saturation
8. Shed assets before they become liabilities
9. Quit while you're ahead

ENTROPY

10. Escape your own black hole
11. Become someone else's components
12. Move to a new singularity
