Global Long-term Economic Growth and the Economic Transformation of Poland and Eastern Europe Stanisław Gomułka, 2023 One of the characteristic facts concerning the catching up countries is the exceptionally large variation in their per capita annual rate of growth from about zero to about 10% The papers published in this monograph show that this rate is strongly dependent on the rate of investment the quality of the labour force and the quality of institutions The rate of investment is in turn dependent on the rate of domestic savings In Poland domestic savings are shown to have been and continue to be very low by international standards The trend rate of growth of about 3.7% has been about 2 pp higher than that of the most developed economies mainly thanks to the development of modern market institutions and a new private sector and partly thanks to foreign direct investments and a significant inflow of finance from the European Union EU The data also show that by far the least successful transformation in Eastern Europe has taken place in Ukraine

Author's Introduction Our discussion is limited to the Technology Frontier Area TFA of the world The central question is how the area's innovation rate changes over time in the course of centuries The analysis indicates that the pattern of change of the innovation rate over time may be eventually hat shaped This Hat Shape Relationship is an empirical law that is given a theoretical interpretation It is in part a prediction based on the author's model of innovation and growth Its acceleration and steady growth segments correspond well to the past reality Its slowdown part is the central thesis of the book

European Energy Futures 2030 Timon Wehnert, Juan Pedro López Araguás, Oliviero Bernardini, Lukasz Jaworski, Birte Holst Jørgensen, Wolfram Jörß, Oliver Nielsen, Augusto Ninni, Anna Oniszk-Poplawska, Daniela Velte, 2007-04-27 Foresight is a vital prerequisite in order to bring our current energy system onto the path of sustainable development Which technologies may be available in 25 years from now Which technologies will be needed in the future The European Energy Delphi project EurEnDel aimed at bringing orienting knowledge to these two questions Trying to show a glimpse of European Energy Futures

in the year 2030 This book contains the main results of the EurEnDel project It includes the findings of the European Energy Delphi survey and the resulting recommendations for R D policy In comparison to other industry sectors energy has two very remarkable features For one transformations are very slow Life times of power plants are 30 years and longer Thus the decisions we take today will still have impacts 30 to 50 years from now which makes sound foresight so important On the other hand the energy system is strongly dependent on national political decisions Priority setting may change quite drastically with new parties coming to power at least for individual country This is one of the reasons why predictions in the energy field can be extremely difficult Combining these two characteristics it becomes evident why foresight in the energy field must not be restricted to an analysis of what the future could be like but must always assess what the future should be like This book tries to weave together these two traces which were inherent in the EurEnDel project

Justification of

Long-term Economic Policy of Renewable Energy Sources Valentinas Klevas, 2016 Recommendations for the establishment of unified principles for the efficiency estimation of renewable energy sources RES technologies and long term incentive system are presented The first focus is on a developed method for the evaluation of RES use impact on macroeconomic indicators Analysis of RES was done according to natural RES such as wind and solar energy Inexhaustibility of such resources is one of the main accents of sustainable development of energy ensuring a reliable supply of energy resources for future generations This type of energy is not produced it is perpetuated thus the extent of the use of one period does not affect the extent of the use of the next period which affects the expectations of investors and consumers The second focus is on the motivation of RES technologies demands Review of support schemes and measures of RES technologies financing lending pricing etc used in foreign countries is presented In the long term the main emphasis should be given to the improvement of educational systems and scientific research concerning scientific and technical progress as well as the formation of various measures and assumptions that affect the country's international competitiveness There is a very important issue of balancing various forms of RES The main approach is organised by the integration of various RES technologies within the programs of a city's energy systems
