In the real or ontological order the perfection of existing in itself is manifestly more fundamental than that of supporting accidents. It is in accordance with a natural law of language that we name things after the properties whereby they reveal themselves to us rather than by names implying what is more fundamental and essential in them. To exist in itself is an absolute perfection essential to substance to support accidents is only a relative perfection nor can we know a priori but a substance might perhaps exist without any accidents we only know that accidents 1 Cf Mercier op at % 142 p 272 1 Cf Kleutghn op cit Dissert vi ch iii ii 592 cannot exist without some substance or subject or power which will sustain them in existence. Ontology is the philosophical discipline which aims to understand how things in the world are divided into categories and how these categories are related together. This is exactly what information scientists aim for in creating structured automated representations called ontologies for managing information in fields such as science government industry and healthcare. Currently these systems are designed in a variety of different ways so they cannot share data with one another. They are often idiosyncratically structured accessible only to those who created them and unable to serve as inputs for automated reasoning. This volume shows in a non technical way and using examples from medicine and biology how the rigorous application of theories and insights from philosophical ontology can improve the ontologies upon which information management depends.
