

Using the Hemocytometer

LAB

Learning Objectives

- 1. Calculate cell concentration from hemocytometer counts.
- 2. Calculate % of cells in each phase of cell cycle from cell counts.

Background

Hemocytometers are the standard instruments used to measure cell concentration. Hemocytometers consist of a counting surface. The cells are loaded on a glass slide with a known volume of liquid. The cells are then counted under a microscope. The number of cells is then divided by the volume of liquid to give the cell concentration.

The hemocytometer is used to measure cell concentration. It is used to measure the number of cells in a given volume of liquid. The cells are loaded on a glass slide with a known volume of liquid. The cells are then counted under a microscope. The number of cells is then divided by the volume of liquid to give the cell concentration.

Part A: Sample Counting Technique

Counting cells with the hemocytometer is a simple task. The steps are as follows:

Using the Hemocytometer

1. Load the hemocytometer with cells. The cells are loaded on a glass slide with a known volume of liquid. The cells are then counted under a microscope. The number of cells is then divided by the volume of liquid to give the cell concentration.

2. Count the cells. The cells are counted under a microscope. The number of cells is then divided by the volume of liquid to give the cell concentration.

1. Calculate the concentration of the cells. The concentration is calculated by dividing the number of cells by the volume of liquid. The concentration is then multiplied by the volume of liquid to give the number of cells.
2. Calculate the percentage of cells in each phase of the cell cycle. The percentage is calculated by dividing the number of cells in each phase by the total number of cells. The percentage is then multiplied by 100 to give the percentage.

Lab Objectives

- 1. Calculate cell concentration from hemocytometer counts.
- 2. Calculate % of cells in each phase of cell cycle from cell counts.
