A New Theory Of Urban Design Center For Environmental Structure:

A New Theory of Urban Design Christopher Alexander, 1987 The venerable cities of the past such as Venice or Amsterdam convey a feeling of wholeness an organic unity that surfaces in every detail large and small in restaurants shops public gardens even in balconies and ornaments But this sense of wholeness is lacking in modern urban design with architects absorbed in problems of individual structures and city planners preoccupied with local ordinances it is almost impossible to achieve In this groundbreaking volume the newest in a highly acclaimed series by the Center for Environmental Structure architect and planner Christopher Alexander presents a new theory of urban design which attempts to recapture the process by which cities develop organically To discover the kinds of laws needed to create a growing whole in a city Alexander proposes here a preliminary set of seven rules which embody the process at a practical level and which are consistent with the day to day demands of urban development He then puts these rules to the test setting out with a number of his graduate students to simulate the urban redesign of a high density part of San Francisco initiating a project that encompassed some ninety different design problems including warehouses hotels fishing piers a music hall and a public square This extensive experiment is documented project by project with detailed discussion of how each project satisfied the seven rules accompanied by floorplans elevations street grids axonometric diagrams and photographs of the scaled down model which clearly illustrate the discussion A New Theory of Urban Design provides an entirely new theoretical framework for the discussion of urban problems one that goes far to remedy the defects which cities have today

Regenerative-Adaptive Design for Sustainable Development Phillip B. Roös, 2020-09-15 In this book the author tests a regenerative adaptive pattern language theory towards investigating the possibilities of a holistic integrated design and planning method for sustainable development that incorporates the principles of regenerative design as well as an adaptive pattern language that re-establishes our wholeness with nature and considers the vulnerabilities of a changing landscape The book examines an integral approach to contemporary theories of planning and design that explores the human nature relationship patterns in social and spatial interconnections between people and their natural environments The interconnectedness of human and natural systems is used to scaffold possible solutions to address key environmental and sustainability issues that specifically address the need for patterns of behaviour that acknowledge the duality of man and nature In 12 chapters the book presents a holistic regenerative adaptive pattern language that encapsulates how communities can better appreciate landscape change under future climate effects and acknowledges the importance to adapt to patterns of change of place and the environment and therefore inform the communities responses for sustainable development The application of the regenerative adaptive pattern language was tested along the Great Ocean Road region of the Victorian coast in Australia The concluding chapters argues that for human settlements and cities to be resilient and sustainable we must understand the interconnected patterns of human built environments and natural systems and how we function in a social spatial dimension with these The book is intended for practitioners and academic scholars with interest in sustainable development regenerative design pattern languages biophilia settlement planning and climate change adaptation

Convivial Urban Spaces Henry Shaftoe, 2012-05-04 Despite developments in urban design during the last few decades architects urban planners and designers often continue to produce areas of bland commercially led urban fabric that deliver the basic functional requirements of shelter work and leisure but are socially unsustainable and likely generators of future problems Convivial Urban Spaces demonstrates that successful urban public spaces are an essential part of a sustainable built environment Without them we are likely to drift into an increasingly private and polarized society with all the problems that would imply Taking a multidisciplinary approach this book draws on research and the literature and theory of environmental psychology and urban design to advance our understanding of what makes effective public spaces Practical guidance is illustrated with case studies from the UK Spain Germany and Italy The result is a practical and clearly presented guide to urban public space for planners architects and students of the urban environment A City is Not a Tree

Christopher Alexander, 2017-08-07 Ecopolis Paul F. Downton, 2008-12-09 From 2008 for the first time in human history half of the world's population now live in cities Yet despite a wealth of literature on green architecture and planning there is to date no single book which draws together theory from the full range of disciplines from architecture planning and ecology which we must come to grips with if we are to design future cities which are genuinely sustainable Paul Downton's Ecopolis takes a major step along this path It highlights the urgent need to understand the role of cities as both agents of change and means of survival at a time when climate change has finally grabbed world attention and it provides a framework for designing cities that integrates knowledge both academic and practical from a range of relevant disciplines Identifying key theorists practitioners places and philosophies the book provides a solid theoretical context which introduces the concept of urban fractals and goes on to present a series of design and planning tools for achieving Sustainable Human Ecological Development SHED Combining knowledge from diverse fields to present a synthesis of urban ecology the book will provide a valuable resource for students researchers and practitioners in architecture construction planning geography and the traditional life sciences
