Griffin, 2004 Randall Griffin's book examines the ways in which artists and critics sought to construct a new identity for America during the era dubbed the Gilded Age because of its leaders' taste for opulence Artists such as Winslow Homer Thomas Eakins and Thomas Anshutz explored alternative American themes and styles but widespread belief in the superiority of European art led them and their audiences to look to the Old World for legitimacy This rich never resolved contradiction between the native and autonomous on the one hand and on the other the European and borrowed serves as the armature of Griffin's innovative look at how and why the world of art became a key site in the American struggle for identity Not only does Griffin trace the interplay of issues of nationalism class and gender in American culture but he also offers insightful readings of key paintings by Eakins and other canonical artists Further Griffin shows that by 1900 the nationalist project in art and criticism had helped open the way for the formulation of American modernism Homer Eakins and Anshutz will be of importance to all those interested in American culture as well as to specialists in art history and art criticism American Carnage Jerome A.
