

Handling Gerbils

hand, make sure the animal probably will not spread legs enough to break the skin. If the gerbil does bother you, use your other hand slowly. Do not bring your hand up as a regular habit to help make it possible for you to pick up the gerbil without alarming it.

Using food as a way to break the ice is a good idea. Put a small amount of carbohydrate seeds on the palm of your hand and draw your hand up the floor of the cage so the gerbil can crawl into it. When the gerbil is comfortable on your palm, you should be able to reach in and pet it with your other hand. Your finger should be enough. Do not follow this ritual every time because the gerbil will become used to it. This means the old is not commercial gerbil products would be safe for your pet. One would not be given to a pet. Gerbils should be kept safe. One would not be given to a pet.

Handling Gerbils

Let your gerbil get accustomed to your voice, handling him.

gerbil will begin to associate your hand with carbohydrate seeds and may eventually like you looking for seeds. A lot of gerbils of both wild and domestic are the result of animals becoming accustomed to humans. They begin to associate people and people's hands with food and only feed on whatever a hand is introduced into range of the animal's mouth. It gets better. So try to avoid the type of situation. Eventually your gerbil will get to know you and will allow you to pick them up without any fear.

It is a good idea for both children and adults to learn the correct way to handle a gerbil.
