

Using the Hemocytometer

LAB

Learning Objectives

- 1. Calculate cell concentration from hemocytometer counts of a cell suspension.
- 2. Calculate % of cells in a population of cells in a given phase of the cell cycle.

Background

Hemocytometers are the standard instruments used to measure cell concentration. Hemocytometers consist of a counting surface. The most common cell counting surface utilized today incorporates a grid in which each 1 mm² of counting area is a standard area (see Figure 1). Using this, cell counts for counting fields with the hemocytometer can be used to estimate cell concentration.

The counting field with the standard area can be used to directly estimate cell concentration by counting the cells in the counting field. The cell concentration is calculated by dividing the number of cells counted by the area of the counting field. The cell concentration is calculated by dividing the number of cells counted by the area of the counting field.
