

CHAPTER 3

Recognizing and Responding to Aquatic Emergencies

A woman with dark hair, wearing a red long-sleeved shirt and white cargo pants, is standing on a rocky shore. She is throwing an orange life preserver with a white rope attached to it towards a person who is partially submerged in a body of water. The person in the water is looking up at the life preserver. The background shows a dense forest of green trees reflected in the water.

Many Americans live, work and play in or near water. In fact, nearly 40 percent of our nation's population lives in counties directly on a shoreline, and this number is getting bigger each year. That's not even counting our access to lakes, rivers, pools and other aquatic environments.

Now, more than ever, knowing how to recognize and respond to an aquatic emergency is as important as knowing how to prevent one.
