

of a wife. However little known the feelings or views of such a man may be on his first entering a neighbourhood, this truth is so well fixed in the minds of the surrounding families, that he is considered the rightful property of some one or other of their daughters. "My dear Mr. Bennet," said his daughter to him one day, "have you heard that Netherfield Park is let at last?" Mr. Bennet replied that he had not. "But it is," returned she; "for Mrs. Long has just been here, and she told me all about it." Mr. Bennet made no answer. "Do you not want to know who has taken it?" cried his wife impatiently. "You want to tell me, and I have no objection to hearing it." This was invitation enough. "Why, my dear, you must know, Mrs. Long says that Netherfield is taken by a young man of large fortune from the north of England; that he came down on Monday in a chaise and four to see the place, and was so much delighted with it, that he agreed with Mr. Morris immediately. He is to take possession before the end of the week, and is to be married to a young lady of large fortune in a week. What do you think of that now? He is married or he will be!" "Oh! that is his wife's fortune, is it?" "No, it is the family's. A single man of large fortune is a rare thing here. What chance have you for our girls?" "How so? How can it affect them?" "My dear Mr. Bennet," replied his wife, "it may affect you. I am sure you will not think of marrying any more, but consider the consequence of your not marrying. You must have two daughters married. Think of this. It may affect your children. Mr. Bennet replied that he did not care to think of it. And he never did again. He had only one other subject of conversation. "What is the name of the young man who is to marry the daughter of the family?" "The name is Mr. Bingley."
