The Fractal Dimension of Architecture Michael J. Ostwald, Josephine Vaughan, 2016-09-01 Fractal analysis is a method for measuring analysing and comparing the formal or geometric properties of complex objects In this book it is used to investigate eighty five buildings that have been designed by some of the twentieth century s most respected and celebrated architects Including designs by Le Corbusier Eileen Gray Frank Lloyd Wright Robert Venturi Frank Gehry Peter Eisenman Richard Meier and Kazuyo Sejima amongst others this book uses mathematics to analyse arguments and theories about some of the world s most famous designs Starting with 625 reconstructed architectural plans and elevations and including more than 200 specially prepared views of famous buildings this book presents the results of the largest mathematical study ever undertaken into architectural design and the largest single application of fractal analysis presented in any field The data derived from this study is used to test three overarching hypotheses about social stylistic and personal trends in design along with five celebrated arguments about twentieth century architecture Through this process the book offers a unique mathematical insight into the history and theory of design

Remains of the Soviet Past in Estonia Francisco Martinez, 2018-07-05 What happens to legacies that do not find any continuation In Estonia a new generation that does not remember the socialist era and is open to global influences has grown up As a result the impact of the Soviet memory in people s conventional values is losing its effective power opening new opportunities for

repair and revaluation of the past Francisco Martinez brings together a number of sites of interest to explore the vanquishing of the Soviet legacy in Estonia the railway bazaar in Tallinn where concepts such as market and employment take on distinctly different meanings from their Western use Linnahall a grandiose venue whose Soviet heritage now poses difficult questions of how to present the building's history Tallinn's cityscape where the social spatial and temporal co evolution of the city can be viewed and debated Narva a city that marks the border between the Russian Federation NATO and the European Union and represents a place of continual negotiation of belonging and the new Estonian National Museum in Raadi an area on the outskirts of Tartu that has been turned into a memory field The anthropological study of all these places shows that national identity and historical representations can be constructed in relation to waste and disrepair too also demonstrating how we can understand generational change in a material sense Praise for Remains of the Soviet Past in Estonia By adopting the tropes of repair and waste this book innovatively manages to link various material registers from architecture intergenerational relations affect and museums with ways of making the past present Through a rigorous yet transdisciplinary method Mart nez brings together different scales and contexts that would often be segregated out In this respect the ethnography unfolds a deep and nuanced analysis providing a useful comparative and insightful account of the processes of repair and waste making in all their material social and ontological dimensions Victor Buchli Professor of Material Culture at UCL This book comprises an endearingly transdisciplinary ethnography of postsocialist material culture and social change in Estonia Mart nez creatively draws on a number of critical and cultural theorists together with additional research on memory and political studies scholarship and the classics of anthropology Grappling concurrently with time and space the book offers a delightfully thick description of the material effects generated by the accelerated post Soviet transformation in Estonia inquiring into the generational specificities in experiencing and relating to the postsocialist condition through the conceptual anchors of wasted legacies and repair This book defies disciplinary boundaries and shows how an attention to material relations and affective infrastructures might reinvigorate political theory Maria M lksoo Senior Lecturer Brussels School of International Studies at the University of Kent

Unfinished Iñaki Carnicero, Carlos Quintáns, 2021-03-29 Spain was one of the countries where the practice of architecture has been most affected by the economic crisis There are few places on earth where such large numbers of buildings were built in such a short period of time The lack of reflection over whether these projects were necessary or valid resulted in the subsequent abandonment of many buildings when their completion or maintenance was discovered not to be economically viable Their appearance throughout Spanish territories has generated a collection of unfinished buildings where the factor of time was eliminated from the formula for making architecture The publication gathers examples of architecture produced during the past few years born out of renunciation and economy of means designed to evolve and adapt to future necessities and trusting in the beauty conferred by the passage of time
