Research for the Developing World Bruce Currie-Alder, 2015-10-08 Research for the developing world can generate evidence on the effectiveness of foreign aid invent new technologies that serve poor people and strengthen research capabilities in poor countries How do countries determine which of these policy goals to pursue Examining the United Kingdom Canada and Australia reveals how each country established a unique approach to research funding Programs and grantmaking evolved in response to various expectations across government tempered by the need to remain credible in the scientific community This book explores the histories of the UK Department for International Development DFID Canada's International Development Research Centre IDRC and the Australian Centre for International Agricultural Research ACIAR Looking back changes in research governance encouraged a shift towards whole of government priorities shorter timeframes for realizing results and performance predicated on academic productivity and research impact Whereas funders used to encourage small is beautiful with local experiments in development today the emphasis is on getting to scale delivering innovation through self financing models Looking forward research for the developing world is fading as part of development assistance yet rising as collaboration on common global challenges Funders are adopting new definitions of performance and actively shaping policy to connect science and international development Leaders are brokering partnerships that connect research governance at home and abroad bridging the incentives towards academic productivity and research impact In short the future of research for the developing world is moving from foreign aid to science diplomacy

Agricultural R and D in the Developing World Philip G. Pardey, Julian M. Alston, Roley Piggott, 2006 The world's agricultural economy was transformed remarkably during the 20th century The agricultural productivity growth that fueled this change was generated primarily by agricultural R D financed and conducted by a small group of rich countries especially the United States but also Japan Germany and France In an increasingly interdependent world both rich and poor countries have depended on agricultural research conducted in the private and public laboratories of these few countries even if they have not contributed to financing the activity But now the rich country research agendas are shifting In particular they are no longer as interested in simple productivity enhancement Dietary patterns and other priorities change as incomes increase Food security concerns are still pervasive among poor people predominantly in poor countries In rich countries we see a declining emphasis on enhancing the production of staple foods and an increasing emphasis on enhancing certain attributes of food such as growing demand for processed and so called functional foods and on food production systems such as organic farming humane livestock production systems localized food sources and fair trade coffee In addition to growing differences between rich and poor countries in consumer demand for innovation research agendas may diverge because of differences in producer and processor demands Farmers in rich countries are demanding high technology inputs that often are not as relevant for subsistence agriculture such as precision farming technology or other capital intensive methods As well as differences in value adding processes to serve consumer demands differences in farm production technologies are emerging to serve the evolving agribusiness demands for farm products with specific attributes for particular food feed energy medical or industrial applications The purpose of this volume is to document the changing institutions and investments in agricultural R D in less developed countries in part to form a companion volume to Paying for Agricultural Productivity by providing a more complete global picture of the issues

Quisumbing, 2001-01-01 How do women's land rights change as customary tenure systems give way to individualized land tenure While the individualization of land rights creates incentives for poor farmers in marginal areas to adopt agroforestry not much is known about its impact on women's land rights Land Trees and Women examines the evolution of customary land tenure institutions in areas of Western Ghana and Western Sumatra where traditional matrilineal inheritance systems have been changing In these two areas the authors find that individualization of land tenure has contributed to both increased gender equity and greater efficiency in agroforestry management While property rights institutions are moving toward providing proper incentives for efficient natural resource management the authors conclude that any program or legal framework that assigns rights to resources must be evaluated for barriers to women's participation Natural Resource Management in the Hillsides of Honduras Bruno Barbier, Gilles Bergeron, 2001-01-01 Farmers who live in fragile tropical hillsides often operate under severe resource constraints and face difficult tradeoffs when confronted with changes in production conditions Using a bioeconomic linear programming model this study simulates the effects of population market and technological changes on farmers' income and on their management of the natural resource in a hillside area of Central Honduras The results show that economic growth and agricultural intensification are not necessarily adverse for fragile environments In fact farmer incomes would be much lower and degradation much higher if intensive agriculture had not been adopted Such a result however must be framed within a complex set of conditioning factors among which agroecology plays a fundamental role Although the economic advantages of horticultural production are clear in the area studied this strategy is not suited for all contexts This report offers a series of policy recommendations that implicitly recognize such limitations thereby helping to direct resources where they will have their greatest impact Strategies for Sustainable Land
