Whether you're studying for an exam or just want to make sense of data around you every day, knowing how and when to use data analysis techniques and formulas of statistics will help. Being able to make the connections between those statistical techniques and formulas is perhaps even more important. It builds confidence when attacking statistical problems and solidifies your strategies for completing statistical projects.

Understanding Formulas for Common Statistics

After data has been collected, the first step in analyzing it is to crunch out some descriptive statistics to get a feeling for the data. For example:

- Where is the center of the data located?
- How spread out is the data?
- How correlated are the data from two variables?

The most common descriptive statistics are in the following table, along with their formulas and a short description of what each one measures.

Statistic	Formula	Used For
Sample mean (average)	$\bar{x} = \frac{\sum x}{n}$	Measure of center; affected by outliers
Median	$\begin{array}{l} n \text{ odd: middle value of} \\ \text{ordered data} \\ \\ n \text{ even: average of the two} \\ \text{middle values} \end{array}$	Measure of center; not affected by outliers
Sample standard deviation	$s = \sqrt{\frac{\sum (x - \bar{x})^2}{n - 1}}$	Measure of variation; "average" distance from the mean
Correlation coefficient	$r = \frac{1}{n - 1} \sum \frac{(x - \bar{x})(y - \bar{y})}{s_x s_y}$	Strength and direction of linear relationship between X and Y

Statistically Figuring Sample Size

When designing a study, the sample size is an important consideration because the larger the sample size, the more data you have, and the more precise your results will be (assuming high-quality data). If you know the level of precision you want (that is, your desired margin of error), you can calculate the sample size needed to achieve it. To find the sample size needed to estimate a population mean (μ), use the following formula:

In this formula, MOE represents the desired margin of error (which you set ahead of time), and σ represents the population standard deviation. If σ is unknown, you can estimate it with the sample standard deviation, s , from a pilot study; z^* is the critical value for the confidence level you need.
