CBT PROGRAMS

Cognitive-behavioral therapy can help you overcome difficulties with executive functioning, helping you manage time, organize, and make long- and short- term plans.

NON-STIMULANTS

A doctor will prescribe one if stimulants aren't helping, if you're suffering from unpleasant side effects, or if they think you could benefit from a combo.

STIMULANTS

They may seem counter-productive, but these meds, which boost brain chemicals that help with focus, are actually the most popular. About 70% see improvement.

ANTIDEPRESSANTS

While not approved by the FDA to treat ADHD, these can be used alone or paired with stimulants for ADHD. They can help with attention and impulsivity.
