Productivity in Higher Education Caroline M. Hoxby, Kevin Stange, 2020-01-10 How do the benefits of higher education compare with its costs and how does this comparison vary across individuals and institutions These questions are fundamental to quantifying the productivity of the education sector The studies in Productivity in Higher Education use rich and novel administrative data modern econometric methods and careful institutional analysis to explore productivity issues The authors examine the returns to undergraduate education differences in costs by major the productivity of for profit schools the productivity of various types of faculty and of outcomes the effects of online education on the higher education market and the ways in which the productivity of different institutions responds to market forces The analyses recognize five key challenges to assessing productivity in higher education the potential for multiple student outcomes in terms of skills earnings invention and employment the fact that colleges and universities are multiproduct firms that conduct varied activities across many domains the fact that students select which school to attend based in part on their aptitude the difficulty of attributing outcomes to individual institutions when students attend more than one and the possibility that some of the benefits of higher education may arise from the system as a whole rather than from a single institution The findings and the approaches illustrated can facilitate decision making processes in higher education incorporate in our curricula The second part focuses on the increasing diversity of students and employees within our schools and organizations in terms of culture language and perception of ability gifts and talents This offers a range of opportunities but at the same time can possibly jeopardize some processes that are taken for granted Chapters in this part analyze the processes that play a crucial role in dealing with this diversity and identify educational practices that can help to harvest the potential that lies within this diversity The third part of this book digs further into the possibilities that are opened up by the implementation of ICT support in our learning environments E learning provides tools to adapt these environments to the needs of an increasingly diverse student population In the last part we focus specifically on the workplace and how learning can be designed in such a way that employees are equipped for a shifting workplace On the one hand it is looked how training can affect performance in the workplace Does learning transfer to the work environment On the other hand it is questioned how one can design affordances to trigger learning in the workplace ALEKS Math Test Prep Reza
