Affective Dialogue Systems Affective Dialogue Systems:

Affective Dialogue Systems Elisabeth André, Laila Dybkjaer, Wolfgang Minker, Paul Heisterkamp, 2004-05-14 Human conversational partners are able at least to a certain extent to detect the speaker's or listener's emotional state and may attempt to respond to it accordingly. When instead one of the interlocutors is a computer a number of questions arise such as the following: To what extent are dialogue systems able to simulate such behaviors? Can we learn the mechanisms of emotional behaviors from observing and analyzing the behavior of human speakers? How can emotions be automatically recognized from a user's mimics, gestures and speech? What possibilities does a dialogue system have to express emotions itself? And very importantly: would emotional system behavior be desirable at all? Given the state of ongoing research into incorporating emotions in dialogue systems we found it timely to organize a Tutorial and Research Workshop on Affective Dialogue Systems ADS2004 at Kloster Irsee in Germany during June 14-16 2004. After two successful ISCA Tutorial and Research Workshops on Multimodal Dialogue Systems at the same location in 1999 and 2002 we felt that a workshop focusing on the role of affect in dialogue would be a valuable continuation of the workshop series. Due to its interdisciplinary nature the workshop attracted submissions from researchers with very different backgrounds and from many different research areas working on, for example, dialogue processing, speech recognition, speech synthesis, embodied conversational agents, computer graphics, animation, user modelling, tutoring systems, cognitive systems and human computer interaction.

Interactive Collaborative Information Systems Robert Babuška, Frans C.A. Groen, 2010-03-22 The increasing complexity of our world demands new perspectives on the role of technology in decision making Human decision making has its limitations in terms of information processing capacity We need new technology to cope with the increasingly complex and information rich nature of our modern society This is particularly true for critical environments such as crisis management and traffic management where humans need to engage in close collaborations with artificial systems to observe and understand the situation and respond in a sensible way We believe that close collaborations between humans and artificial systems will become essential and that the importance of research into Interactive Collaborative Information Systems ICIS is self evident Developments in information and communication technology have radically changed our working environments The vast amount of information available nowadays and the wirelessly networked nature of our modern society open up new opportunities to handle difficult decision making situations such as computer supported situation assessment and distributed decision making To make good use of these new possibilities we need to update our traditional views on the role and capabilities of information systems The aim of the Interactive Collaborative Information Systems project is to develop techniques that support humans in complex information environments and that facilitate distributed decision making capabilities ICIS emphasizes the importance of building actor agent communities close collaborations between human and artificial actors that highlight their complementary capabilities and in which task distribution is flexible and adaptive
