Looking Backward—Chicago AAAS Annual Meeting

Walter G. Berl, Meeting Editor

Soon after the conclusion of an annual meeting of the AAAS it is customary to report on its successes and to mention some of its disappointments. This year it seems worthwhile to cast a wider net, to analyze the effort over a longer time span and to fit it into the framework of the meeting objectives.

The central, basic, and primary goal of the Meetings is to present, in full public view, annual reports on the state of science and to submit these verbal reports to as wide an audience as possible. To do justice to this task requires that no less than three broad areas be covered: (i) reports on advances in all the fields of science and of technology, (ii) discussions of the consequences of new discoveries and developments on other human endeavors, and (iii) concern with goals and with values.

Is it possible to carry out to these difficult aims? Can one supplement the many technical meetings that encourage specialization and depth, and those that concentrate on one topic or a few topics, with a meeting dedicated to breadth of coverage, to the interaction among scientific fields, and to interchanges with practitioners in fields outside of science?

It is best to let the record speak. Three dozen symposia, a number that could easily be doubled or tripled, held at AAAS Meetings during the last 3 years are listed as examples of a superb effort in filling this matrix.
