

The background of the image is a reproduction of the painting 'Prometheus Bound' by Peter Paul Rubens. It depicts the Titan Prometheus, who was punished for stealing fire from the gods, bound to a rock by an eagle. In the painting, Prometheus is shown in a state of extreme physical and emotional suffering, his body contorted in pain. He is bound to a large, dark rock with heavy chains. An eagle, with its wings spread, is perched on his back, its talons gripping his flesh. Prometheus's face is a study in agony, with his mouth open in a scream and his eyes wide. His long, dark hair is wild and unkempt. The lighting is dramatic, with strong highlights on his muscular torso and deep shadows in the folds of his clothing and the crevices of the rock. In the upper right corner, a figure, likely Hermes, is partially visible, looking down at the suffering Prometheus with a cold, detached expression. The overall composition is dynamic, with strong contrasts and a sense of intense drama.
