Ecosystems: The Challenge of Climate Change Felipe Bravo, Valerie LeMay, Robert Jandl, Klaus Gadow, 2008-05-20 Climate changes particularly warming trends have been recorded around the globe For many countries these changes in climate have become evident through insect epidemics e g Mountain Pine Beetle epidemic in Western Canada bark beetle in secondary spruce forests in Central Europe water shortages and intense forest fires in the Mediterranean countries e g 2005 droughts in Spain and unusual storm activities e g the 2004 South East Asia Tsunami Climate changes are expected to impact vegetation as manifested by changes in vegetation extent migration of species tree species composition growth rates and mortality The International Panel on Climate Change IPCC has included discussions on how forests may be impacted and how they may be used to mitigate the impacts of changes in climate to possibly slow the rate of change This book provides current scientific information on the biological and economical impacts of climate changes in forest environments as well as information on how forest management activities might mitigate these impacts particularly through carbon sequestration. Case studies from a wide geographic range are presented. This information is beneficial to managers and researchers interested in climate change and impacts upon forest environments and economic activities. This volume which forms part of Springer's book series Managing Forest Ecosystems presents state of the art research results, visions and theories as well as specific methods for sustainable forest management in changing climatic conditions.

Natural Disturbance and Stand Development Principles for Ecological Forestry Jerry F. Franklin, 2007. Incorporating an understanding of natural disturbance and stand development processes more fully into forestry practice is the basis for an ecological forestry approach. Such an approach must include 1. understanding the importance of biological legacies created by a tree regenerating disturbance and incorporating legacy management into harvesting prescriptions; 2. recognizing the role of stand development processes, particularly individual tree mortality in generating structural and compositional heterogeneity in stands and implementing thinning prescriptions that enhance this heterogeneity; and 3. appreciating the role of recovery periods between disturbance events in the development of stand complexity. These concepts when incorporated into a comprehensive silvicultural approach are labeled the three legged stool of ecological forestry. This report reviews the scientific basis for the three legged stool of ecological forestry to provide a conceptual foundation for its wide implementation.

BLM Density Management and Riparian Buffer Study, 2006. General Technical Report PNW-GTR, 2005. Silvicultural Research and the Evolution of Forest Practices in the Douglas-fir Region, 2007. Silvicultural practices in the Douglas fir region evolved through a combination of formal research, observation and practical experience of forest managers and silviculturists and changing economic and social factors. This process began more than a century ago and still continues. It has had a great influence on the economic well being of the region and on the present characteristics of the regions forests. This long history is unknown to most of the public and much of it is unfamiliar to many natural resource specialists outside and even within the field of silviculture. We trace the history of how we got where we are today and the contribution of silvicultural research to the evolution of forest practices. We give special attention to the large body of information developed in the first half of the past century that is becoming increasingly unfamiliar to both operational foresters and perhaps more importantly to those engaged in forestry research. We also discuss some current trends in silviculture and silviculture related research.

Managing for Wildlife Habitat in West-side Production Forests, 2007. Entrepreneurship and Management in Forestry and Wood Processing Franz Schmithüsen, Bastian Kaiser, Albin Schmidhauser, Stephan Mellinghoff, Karoline Perchthaler, Alfred Kammerhofer, 2015-05-08. Forestry has long been in a rather favourable position in offering a valuable raw material source in high demand. However with rapidly changing end user demands and cost competitiveness within the forest and wood chain as a whole the industry is needing to adapt. Explaining entrepreneurial action as part of a chain of comprehensive value added processes leads to a new perception of forest production and wood processing This book applies the main concepts of modern managerial science to the world of forestry and is the perfect book for students studying forestry and wood processing as well as entrepreneurs and managers within the sector Topics are covered from an entrepreneurial perspective and include perspectives from accounting finance economics supply chain management marketing and strategy
