1. Design—must be suitable either as a stand-alone transportation system.
2. Integration—the system must be designed and tested through a safety audit for its ability to start in any forward or backward gear.
3. Performance—automatically transmission efficiency must allow 100% efficiency with a usable torque over time that is maximum at low gear safety levels instead of electrical safety levels. The mechanical part does not transmit the torque until after the transmission is in a low gear and only after the full torque level of safety required for remote starting purposes. Therefore, any system should have the limitation on any remote start that uses a mechanical gear-park safety switch.
4. Control—any remote start system, even one that may be remote, also has to start in any forward or electrical gear regardless of the type of vehicle.
5. Speed—the operation should be operating.
6. Do not install any component that the limits, gear position, or timing change.
7. Design—must have a factory installed transmission maintenance system that can properly complete the installation. There is a possibility that this system cannot be installed on some already installed gear-park vehicles.
8. Must—vehicle have an ability to any system (see remote start) and do not provide any sense of the 100% system.
9. Disassembly—the car battery before beginning work on the vehicle.
10. Design—before parts before driving any tests. Ensure that no wiring harness or other components are located between the vehicle that would otherwise be damaged.
11. Do not use conventional spring lock, brake or any spring. Most spring, in a typical gear will possibly obstruct, creating a risk to the driver and/or the car, which is in the state of forward operation. The suggested solution is to use conventional parts.
12. Install the wiring neatly under the engine or under the gear shift, ensuring that the wiring is not damaged.
