Anatomía de la crisis José Ramón de la Osa Bonilla, 2020-02-18 En España tenemos la sensación que nos llega la siguiente crisis sin habernos recuperado de la anterior. El empleo ha recuperado los niveles pre crisis y los salarios ya suben en ciertos sectores pero el desempleo y la precariedad continúan siendo muy elevados. La recuperación del mercado inmobiliario en las grandes ciudades ha ido muy por delante de la mejora del poder adquisitivo del ciudadano medio lo que nos lleva a pensar en otra burbuja inmobiliaria. Cuando parezca que se iban a revertir las medidas extraordinarias de política monetaria tomadas por el BCE nos encaminamos hacia un escenario de tipos de interés negativos seguramente el mayor experimento monetario de la historia reciente. A pesar del cúmulo de errores cometidos en la gestión de la crisis y de las graves secuelas que esta ha dejado en la sociedad española estamos mejor preparados para la siguiente crisis de lo que pensamos. Tras habernos asomado al vacío en 2012 hemos sido capaces de volver a la senda del crecimiento económico evitando un estallido social. Los españoles tenemos la habilidad de buscarnos la vida y salir adelante cuando nadie da un duro por nosotros. Nietzsche tenía razón lo que no te mata te hace más
