Art, Science, Religion, Spirituality David V White, 2015-05-02 Retiring at the age of 35 gives one time to reflect on what is truly important After successful ventures in business politics and education I devoted several years to study travel and spiritual practice Meaningful experiences came and insights arose Further insights emerged through interactions with participants in seminars and workshops given over the last twenty years One insight is this We tend to compartmentalize our lives thinking separately about relationships finances health concerns spiritual matters career sex values passions goals political views group identities finding pleasure aesthetic interests and on and on At the living edge however where life happens all these currents mingle and merge To find meaning and live a fulfilling life requires that we discover how these separate currents can be prioritized and harmoniously integrated The core motivations we humans have felt through the centuries have not changed much The challenge is as it has always been to discover and put into practice wise responses to these motivations In ancient Greece the quest for this wisdom was exemplified by the admonition of Socrates Know Thyself Two thousand years later mathematician physicist and philosopher Blaise Pascal said It is an extraordinary blindness to live without investigating what we are Continuing this theme in the 20th century the humorist James Thurber advised All human beings should try to learn before they die what they are running from and to and why Four of the most valuable trails through the wilderness of life s confusion are 1 Engagement with science 2 Creating and experiencing art 3 Following a religious tradition and 4 Undertaking a spiritual journey Although different on the surface these four are not so different underneath As Albert Einstein succinctly put it All religions arts and sciences are branches of the same tree This book explores these four branches of the tree of life art science religion and spirituality Join me in an exploration of the commonalities between them and the guidance they each provide for a fulfilling and meaningful life EINSTEIN ON LIFE

Philosophy of Education Malcolm D. Evans,1998 That process philosophy can be the foundation of the theory and practice of educating human beings is the main argument of this book The process philosophy of Alfred North Whitehead 1861 1947 is the particular thinking on which this book is based Readers are shown that Whitehead s process philosophy provides a frame a conceptual matrix that addresses their concerns about education and offers direction for their educative acts Whitehead theorized that all living entities are connected in some way Relatedness connectedness and holism are recurring themes in this exploration of Whitehead s implied philosophy of education Whitehead never wrote a philosophy of education but his writings over a period of nearly thirty years reveal a persistent interest and concern with education His work ranging from Introduction to Mathematics 1911 to Adventures of Ideas 1938 is drawn on here to construct not Whitehead s philosophy of education but a Whiteheadian philosophy of education Whitehead and Philosophy of Education brings to scholars and students of education an understanding of Whitehead as an important figure in philosophy particularly philosophy of education an acquaintance with process philosophy a brief treatment of Whitehead s life and an account of events and
