Dialogicality in Development Ingrid E. Josephs, 2003-09-30 The crucial nature of developmental theory is the question of relationship between cultural and personal facets of human development Dialogue is a useful concept to specify this relationship from a process oriented perspective In its broadest sense the notion of dialogue entails the interaction between at least two entities persons meanings perspectives out of which novelty can but need not emerge Thus dialogic models are open for developmental questions These issues are examined in this the first volume in which the increasingly popular metaphor of dialogue is systematically applied to developmental issues Dialogue is a multilevel concept and can be understood 1 as a real exchange between two interacting persons 2 as the interaction between culture at large e g stories and narratives and the interacting developing person and 3 as a metaphor for developmental processes in general In the first part of this international volume the concept of dialogue is elaborated by researchers from different disciplines The focus of the second section is on dialogic models in the area of self development The third deals with the dialogical co development of person and culture

Crossing Borders, Writing Texts, Being Evaluated Anne

Golden, Lars Anders Kulbrandstad, Lawrence Jun Zhang, 2021-12-14 This book provides critical perspectives on issues relating to writing norms and assessment as well as writing proficiency development and suggests that scholars need to both carefully examine testing regimes and develop research informed perspectives on tests and testing practices In this way schools institutions of adult education and universities can better prepare learners with differing cultural experiences to meet the challenges The book brings together empirical studies from diverse geographical contexts to address the crossing of literacy borders with a focus on academic genres and practices Most of the studies examine writing in countries where the norms and expectations are different but some focus on writing in a new discourse community set in a new discipline The chapters shed light on commonalities and differences between these two situations with respect to the expectations and evaluations facing the writers They also consider the extent to which the norms that the writers bring with them from their educational backgrounds and own cultures are compromised in order to succeed in the new educational settings

Copyright, Communication and Culture Carys J. Craig, 2011 In this provocative book Carys Craig challenges the assumptions of possessive individualism embedded in modern day copyright law arguing that the dominant conception of copyright as private property fails to adequately reflect the realities of cultural creativity Employing both theoretical argument and doctrinal analysis including the novel use of feminist theory the author explores how the assumptions of modern copyright result in law that frequently restricts the kinds of expressive activities it ought to encourage In contrast Carys Craig proposes a relational theory of copyright based on a dialogic account of authorship and guided by the public interest in a vibrant participatory culture Through a critical examination of the doctrines of originality and fair dealing as well as the relationship between copyright and freedom of expression she explores how this relational theory of copyright law could further the public purposes of the copyright system and the social values it embodies This unique and insightful study will be of great interest to students and scholars of intellectual property communications cultural studies feminist theory and the arts and humanities
