Addiction robs us of time that would better be spent in improving our own lives and as a byproduct other people's. Even those who think they are not addicted but would like to improve themselves can all benefit. It has a secular approach supporting freedom of religious belief or none for all. And inline with the UN's ideas anyone should be able to change their beliefs at any time. So it is suggested that people who attend meetings primarily address their addictions and keep the meetings non religious. There are plenty of opportunities to practice religion, atheism and agnosticism elsewhere. 12 step meetings are non religious so they are aimed at everyone too. Not everyone addresses addiction through a twelve step meeting though and those that choose an alternative route will find Everyone's an Addict equally helpful to them whether they attend a clinic or choose another method. This book takes the format of an inspirational comment for each day of the year. Therefore the appropriately numbered step tradition and concept from AA is covered month by month. Further 12 step programs like NA, OA, GA, SA and others are given coverage too. Are you an addict? For the inquisitive drinker asking the question Am I an alcoholic the question is Do you have trouble stopping drinking once you have started? If so you are most likely an alcoholic. Is it the same for you with drugs, eating, gambling or violent behavior? Did you indulge in it when your intentions were dead set against it? Do you have other disorders around eating like bulimia? Is sex something that preoccupies you unduly? Do you have behavioral problems in other directions such as anger, over dependence on other people, hiding away from the world, lying, bullying and so on? Sometimes it is a multiple problem and the prime addiction needs to be identified. In Twelve Step programs these disorders must be self diagnosed and the stepper must be a willing participant. Simply it is anyone with a desire to stop doing whatever is causing the problem. Members hope that when potential newcomers reach their rock bottom they will have a moment of clarity and turn into a willing or at least inquisitive customer before it is too late. They hope the existence of these programs will come to the prospect's mind at the appropriate time, maybe due to the seed planted by information in a school talk years before or through information passed on through doctors, magistrates, police and the press. If you don't feel your behavior is obsessive or addictive if you are interested in this book to make a general improvement in your behavior ask yourself a similar question to the one above. Have you behaved badly towards someone when you had not intended to or perhaps your behavior was over the top? Do you ratchet up an argumentative situation rather than try to take the heat out of it or walk away? Are you determined to have your way for the sake of it when there are many suitable ways to go? Are you controlling of other people or a compulsive helper? Results of these 12 step programs include the relief of identifying yourself as an addict or someone with problem behavior after years of denial, the pride of being honest with yourself and the beginning of building your self esteem, knowing yourself better and accentuating the positives. Then there is further self improvement in the calming influence of meditation. Finally there is the task of helping other addicts and people at large because the programs are bridges to normal living.
