

SELF-NARRATIVE, EMBODIED ACTION, AND SOCIAL CONTEXT

Shaun Gallagher

In recent philosophy of mind, informed by ongoing research in the cognitive neurosciences, there has been a tendency to offer deflationary or reductive explanations of self and self-identity. The background to such accounts includes a complex history of the problem of personal identity from Hume to Parfit. Paul Ricoeur has provided an insightful perspective on this history based on his distinction between ipse identity and idem identity.¹ My intention is not to rehearse that history, or even to update it, but rather, assuming that history as background, to engage in a dialogue with the more recent proponents of deflationary, reductive, and internalist accounts of the self, and especially those accounts that put the notion of a narrative self into question.²

Philosophically there is some question as to whether an account of the narrative self is a sufficient account of the self more generally, that is, whether the whole story about the self is just that it is nothing more than a story about the self (this is one version of a deflationary account of the self). There is, nevertheless, a growing consensus that the concept of the narrative self captures something essential about human existence. In this regard, specifically, there are three issues that I want to address. First, is it possible to defend an account of the narrative self which is consistent with discoveries in cognitive neuroscience, but that remains nonetheless non-reductive? Second, how does such an account relate to an embodied-enactive approach to questions of self-identity? And third, to what extent does such an account involve dimensions of intersubjectivity?

The appeal to neuroscience may seem misplaced to some readers. Ricoeur is clear in his insistence that questions of the mind, addressed by phenomenology and hermeneutics, belong to a discourse different from and irreducible to neuroscience.³ To speak of the body from a phenomenological perspective, or from the perspective of lived action, is quite different from speaking of the body from the perspective of natural science. Yet Ricoeur is careful not to suggest an ontological dualism; rather we have here a semantic dualism, two different languages attempting to give an account of human action. He asks a basic question: "does any knowledge that I may have of the brain add to the knowledge that I have of myself simply through direct acquaintance with my body, without knowing anything about my brain?"⁴ To this question I want to give a qualified affirmative answer. To the extent that I am not just a mind, and not just a lived body, and to the extent that my existence depends on a biological constitution, knowledge about the brain can enrich my knowledge of myself and of the capacities that make me what I am. The idea is not to replace one discourse with another, but to supplement one with the other. Furthermore, the idea is not simply to look for correlations, but to show a certain consistency between these two ap-

² For purposes of this paper, a deflationary account of the self is any attempt to explain the self as simply a product of language, for example, our use of the first-person pronoun. For a good discussion of such an account, see Jose L. Bermudez, The Paradox of Self-Consciousness (Cambridge, Mass.: MIT Press, 1998), 96ff. An internalist account of the self is any attempt to explain the self as a product of narrowly defined mental or physical processes, where such an account would exclude or ignore embodied action in social contexts. A reductionist account is any attempt to explain the self entirely in terms of brain processes. These distinctions and definitions are oversimplified, but nonetheless sufficient for purposes of my general argument, which treats all such accounts as one large target.

Knowledge and Practical Reason Marcelino Agís Villaverde, 2012 The work of Paul Ricoeur can be regarded as a faithful expression of the philosophy of the 20th century and as the paradigmatic exponent of a new philosophical character for the 21st century Without belonging to any particular school Ricoeur discussed a wide range of philosophical topics with many of his insights being prophetic indeed This book demonstrates that there is no single interpretation of Ricoeur's philosophy describing his way of thinking Rather the book provides an opportunity to see Ricoeur's thoughts as a guide for a human enveloped in the experience of life and being By exploring Paul Ricoeur in his life circumstances through war the academy and his relationships as well as through his works and his own words this book offers a more complete picture of the many aspects of one man and the legacy he left behind Series International Studies in Hermeneutics and Phenomenology Vol 5

Deconstruction? Christopher Watkin, 2009-03-03 Phenomenology or Deconstruction challenges traditional understandings of the relationship between phenomenology and deconstruction through new readings of the work of Maurice Merleau Ponty Paul Ricur and Jean Luc Nancy A constant dialogue with Jacques Derrida s engagement with phenomenological themes provides the impetus to establishing a new understanding of being and presence that exposes significant blindspots inherent in traditional readings of both phenomenology and deconstruction In reproducing neither a stock phenomenological reaction to deconstruction nor the routine deconstructive reading of phenomenology Christopher Watkin provides a fresh assessment of the possibilities for the future of phenomenology along with a new reading of the deconstructive legacy Through detailed studies of the philosophy of Merleau Ponty Ricur and Nancy he shows how a phenomenological tradition much wider and richer than Husserlian or Heideggerean thought alone can take account of Derrida s critique of ontology and yet still hold a commitment to the ontological This new reading of being and presence fundamentally re draws our understanding of the relation of deconstruction and phenomenology and provides the first sustained discussion of the possibilities and problems for any future deconstructive phenomenology A Passion for the Possible Brian Treanor, Henry Isaac Venema, 2010 Paul

Ricoeur s entire philosophical project narrates a passion for the possible expressed in the hope that in spite of death closure and sedimentation life is opened by superabundance by how the world gives us much more than is possible Ricoeur s philosophical anthropology is a phenomenology of human capacity which gives onto the groundless ground of human being namely God Thus the story of the capable man beginning with original goodness held captive by a servile will and ending with the possibility of liberation and regeneration of the heart underpins his passion for the more than possible The essays in this volume trace the fluid movement between phenomenological and religious descriptions of the capable self that emerges across Ricoeur s oeuvre and establish points of connection for future developments that might draw inspiration from this body of thought Ricoeur: A Guide for the Perplexed David Pellauer, 2007-12-09 Paul Ricoeur was one of the giants of contemporary Continental philosophy He also knew and drew upon the Analytic tradition Over a long life he pursued questions of philosophical anthropology as they relate to a good life lived with and for others in just institutions His work has been translated into numerous languages and widely discussed by legal theorists historians literary critics and theologians as well as philosophers Ricoeur A Guide for the Perplexed is the ideal text to support anyone trying to reach a firm understanding of this important contemporary philosopher The guide locates Ricoeur s output in its historical and intellectual context provides an overview of Ricoeur s central ideas and defines carefully the key terms in his philosophical writing Close Ricoeur's importance for particular disciplines including literary criticism, social theory, political philosophy, and theology is explained and explored. Above all, this Guide for the Perplexed offers constructive and illuminating suggestions for how to read Ricoeur. Fault Lines of Modernity Kitty Millet, Dorothy Figueira, 2018-09-20 This state-of-the-art collection offers fresh perspectives on why intersections between literature, religion, and ethics can address the fault lines of modernity and are not necessarily the cause of modernity's faults. From a diverse cohort of scholars from around the world with appointments in comparative literature and other disciplines, the essays suggest that the imagined hegemony of a Judeo-Christian Western project is neither exclusively true nor productive. However, the essays also suggest that elements of the Western religious traditions are important vectors for understanding modernity's complicated relationship to the past.

Hermeneutic Philosophies of Social Science Babette Babich, 2017-10-23 Hermeneutic philosophies of social science offer an approach to the philosophy of social science foregrounding the human subject and including attention to history as well as a methodological reflection on the notion of reflection, including the intrusions of distortions and prejudice. Hermeneutic philosophies of social science offer an explicit orientation to and concern with the subject of the human and social sciences. Hermeneutic philosophies of the social science represented in the present collection of essays draw inspiration from Gadamer's work as well as from Paul Ricoeur, in addition to Michel de Certeau and Michel Foucault among others. Special attention is given to Wilhelm Dilthey, in addition to the broader phenomenological traditions of Edmund Husserl and Martin Heidegger, as well as the history of philosophy in Plato and Descartes. The volume is indispensable reading for students and scholars interested in epistemology, philosophy of science, social studies of knowledge, as well as social studies of technology.
